Bubba's Beach Club To Reopen In April

Bubba's Beach Club, a restaurant/bar that burnt to a crisp two months ago as the result of a suspicious explosion, is expected to reopen in April, according to owner Robert Nicklin. The 2,600 square-foot club at 404 Laskin Road, was cleaned out last weekend so remodeling can begin.

The club, which at the time of the fire had only been open for the eight months, had a reputation as Virginia Beach's "Cheers," where locals, the military and tourists socialized.

Nicklin said the club will have the same look and atmosphere after the remodeling.

It is still unknown how the fire was started.

A Farce?

City Plans To Improve Streets In Some Neighborhoods; Councilman Perry Says Blacks Are Low On The City's Priority List

By Karen Dalrymple

Virginia Beach City Council recently allocated $7,500 to make temporary street repairs in Burton Station and Seatack, two of 12 city areas targeted for improvements.

Councilman John Perry, who is running for reelection in May, said he has been waiting since 1979 for the city to improve the roads.

"This is just a farce to fool the people into thinking we are doing something in Burton Station and Seatack," the Bayside Borough representative said.

Seatack is located off Birdneck Road. Burton Station is off Northampton Boulevard.

Mary Anne Ustick, director of the Virginia Beach Department of Housing, said the city receives $2 million per year from community block grant money, most of which has provided water and sewers in 11 low-income local neighborhoods and street drainage in six of them. Seatack and Burton Station are the only neighborhoods left for improvements.

Ustick said $1,500 of the $7,500 will be used to repair several streets in Seatack, namely Brooklyn Street and Old Lane. Seatack residents, Ustick said, have been complaining for years about the road conditions.

The temporary improvements in Seatack will consist of filling in potholes and laying stone. The remaining $6,000 will be used to widen the streets and lay tar down in Burton Station, which is located off of Northampton Boulevard.

But Perry doesn't believe the work will ever get done. He said the low-income neighborhoods, which house mostly blacks, are at the bottom of the city's priority list. He said racism has gotten in the way of the area's improvements.

Virginia Beach SPCA To Establish Volunteer Auxiliary; Shelter Needs Help With Fund Raising And Running Building

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Even with a $10,000 a year grant from the City of Virginia Beach, the SPCA on Holland Road is still $440,000 short of matching its annual operating budget. As a result, the nonprofit organization is forming an SPCA Auxiliary to assist in successfully running the shelter.

"We're looking to form a group of volunteers that would be able to help us not only in fund-raising projects, but with projects the staff doesn't have time to do," said SPCA development director, Kathy Prendergast.

The SPCA currently utilizes the help of approximately 25 volunteers, but Prendergast said they are hoping to double or triple that number. The auxiliary volunteers will be used for the bulk mailing of the shelter's quarterly newsletter.

Another volunteer program in the works is the canister program, where approximately 100 canisters will be placed in businesses with a picture of an animal on each of them. The canister will ask for support for the Virginia Beach SPCA through donations.

Prendergast said the SPCA is also planning an aluminum recycling program, in which boxes or bags will be placed in stores that have drink machines. Employees and patrons can drop their cans in the bags so the auxiliary volunteers can pick them up to be recycled.

"We need people to also help us address invitations. We would hope the auxiliary would form committees," she added.

The SPCA needs the extra help to assist the organization's board of directors. The board is responsible for overseeing administrative policies, financial aspects of the shelter, soliciting funds for the building fund, the public relations committee and the shelter committee.

"The board is a very active board. They support the shelter financially," said Prendergast. So far, the SPCA has raised $550,000 towards the cost of the new $1 million building. "We really are trying to increase our donations from the community."

A sign at the shelter's front desk lists dropping off fees for certain animals.

The SPCA also asks for a small fee when pet owners put their animals up for adoption. The shelter took in more than 7,000 animals in 1989 and has a 50 percent adoption rate. The animals are kept at the shelter as long as they stay healthy and there is available space. She said many times the SPCA does not receive the fee because people have tied their pets to the shelter's front door and left them there over night.

Prendergast said the volunteers are also needed in the shelter itself for kennel assistance such as feeding, cleaning, grooming and walking the animals. She said she doesn't think it will be a problem recruiting volunteers.

"I think volunteerism in the nation as a whole has been on a rise. I think people are out there; it's just letting them know what's available," she said.

In addition to taking in abandoned animals, the SPCA also provides education programs to local schools and nursing homes as well as pet therapy programs. The programs cost extra money, but Prendergast said it's worth it.

"The education of children of the future is important. There's just a lot of new things we're looking at, not only to raise money, but to provide education programs for the community," she said.

Virginia Beach Renews Agreement With Fort Story To Use Their Beach; City Has Access To 20 Acres For Three More Years

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Virginia Beach City Council recently authorized an ordinance asking City Manager Aubrey Watts to execute an agreement to use approximately 20.05 acres at Fort Story Military Reservation for public recreational purposes.

According to Libby Alfriend, Ft. Story's public affairs officer, the city must renew the agreement every three years.

"Since 1973, the city has used an area adjacent to 89th Street (Ft. Story's East Gate) for public swimming only," she said.

The beach is open to the public on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from Memorial Day weekend to Labor Day weekend. Last summer, 11,387 people visited the beach over 47 days. Two hundred forty-two vehicles used the parking lots per day.

"It's not a touristy type thing. It's more of a locals' place. It's really the local residents, the home-folks, so to speak, who utilize it," said Alfriend.

The city, which has a license to use the facility, contracts lifeguards to oversee the safety of the visitors. The city's Department of Parks and Recreation maintains the beach, which offers port-a-johns, but no concession stands. Ft. Story uses the 750 to 800 feet of beachfront for training exercises during the week.

"The city would like to have additional use of the beaches, more days for the patrons to use them" said Dick Nutter, Parks District supervisor, who used to be in charge of running the beach.

Harold Whitehurst, director of Parks and Recreation, said the beach, which is larger and wider than the beaches at the south end of the Oceanfront, usually fills up in the morning, but the crowd thins out by the afternoon.

"It opens up another beach and access to a beach is important. The extra acres are helpful," he said. "We enjoy working with the military. It's a nice arrangement."

Alfriend agreed. "We have a pretty good working relationship with the city. It's just the public's private beach. It doesn't have the glitz of the beach downtown," she said.

The renewal agreement goes into effect May 1. The city will have renewed access to the beach until 1993.

Council Still Seeking Labor Day Answer

By Leo Cahill
City Council Reporter

Although Virginia Beach city council has reports and recommendations from four groups on the annual Labor Day celebration, it is still thrashing around for answers as to what to do about Labor Day Weekend 1990.

The main question is how much the city should get involved in preparations, such as entertainment, whether a committee should be delegated to handle all the arrangements for the event or whether Council itself should serve as the committee.

What the citizens are saying, Councilman Harold Heischob said, is that "we (council) have control to say there will be no event of that nature. Unfortunately, the citizens feel we have that kind of control . . . We're ultimately going to have to try not letting it happen — or to prepare for it."

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that she was sure the celebrants, black college students affiliated with fraternities and sororities and those who join them, will be back. "That's where I am," said Heischob, "but I want to hear it from nine other people."

Other council members evidenced little doubt that the students would back — a reported 100,000 came to the Beach last Labor Day weekend which ended in riots and looting — but they were not at all sure what council's role should be, in the whole thing.

Some considerations were omitted in the reports, such as the city's

Paddling Banned

Punishment Of Children Should Be Left To Parents

There are many parents who will probably be thrilled at the fact that corporal punishment has been banned in the state of Virginia. And they have every right to be.

Even though Virginia Beach hasn't enacted the corporal punishment law for years, there was a time when students could be paddled by their principal, vice-principal or teacher. An actual wooden paddle was used to discipline kids when they got themselves in trouble.

But, this is the twentieth century! It's easy to understand why paddling was used in the early 1990s, but nowadays people are more educated and more in tune as to how to punish children and deal with their wrongdoings.

Some parents of children who were paddled even went as far as filing a law suit with the teacher or school. Most of the time the case never went to court because the school board proved that the teacher had every right to paddle the child. After all, it was the law. But still some parents screamed child abuse.

Although the school officials had to have an adult witness present, when paddling a child, it is not really their place to do the spanking. That should be left up to the parent, even though some parents condoned teachers helping to discipline their children. Now there are alternative forms of punishments in local schools such as detention and in-school suspension. It seems that spending a few hours after school would have more impact on a child than a smack in the butt.

Although corporal punishment no longer exists, there are still clauses in the law that allows school officials to use reasonable and necessary force. Teachers may use this force to prevent: The use of incidental, minor or reasonable physical contact or other actions designed to maintain order and control; the use of reasonable and necessary force to quell a disturbance or remove a student from the scene of a disturbance which threatens physical injury to persons or damage to property; the use of force to prevent a student from inflicting physical harm on himself; the use of force for self-defense or the defense of others; the use of force to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects or controlled substances or paraphernalia which are upon the person of the student or within his control.

This new language of the law seems fair; if a child is caught in school with a gun, it may take force to get it away from him. But, to paddle a child for chewing gum in class or talking too much, was ridiculous. Paddling was just an easy and quick way of dealing with a problem child. — K.L.D.

Volunteers Needed

SPCA Forms Volunteer Auxiliary To Help Out

If you have a weakspot in your heart for animals, then the SPCA has just the thing for you. No, they don't want you to adopt an animal, although that would be nice. The SPCA needs volunteers to help run the shelter.

Because they are on a tight budget, the SPCA uses mostly volunteers to bathe, feed, walk and groom the animals. The volunteers will also be used to help with the SPCA's fundraising efforts.

If you're not able to have a pet of your own, or you just care enough about animals to help out, call the SPCA. These animals have been abandoned by their owners for one reason or another; they need loving people to take care of them while they wait to be adopted.

Not only do the animals need help, but the shelter needs help too. The nonprofit organization must survive on funds donated by the community, and there are so many projects in the works. They really need extra people to help carry out these projects.

If you have a few hours or spare time on the weekends, the SPCA would love your assistance. So would the animals! Who knows, there may even be the perfect animal for you just waiting for you to take it home. — K.L.D.

Ft. Story Provides City With Use Of Its Beach

Although summer hasn't arrived yet and there's still a few months left before the hustle and bustle of the tourist season begins, Virginia Beach residents should know about a beach that is available to them during the summer months.

Few people may know about the beach located at Ft. Story, which is open to the public on weekends. The city has an agreement with the Army to use the beach.

During the summer, the beach along the strip is the usual hotspot for both tourists and locals. But some people might like to get away from the crowds and just relax. They can do that on 89th Street. The beaches along the North End are becoming more crowded each summer and finding a parking space is next to impossible. The beach at Ft. Story also offers plenty of free

Lee Cahill's City Council Report

Council Wants To Block Legislation To Lessen Localities' Zone Property Power

City council wants to block legislation before the General Assembly which would lessen the power municipalities have to zone property.

Several bills under consideration pertaining to the time vesting of rights are weighted in favor of the developer by limiting the power of localities to zone property as they see fit.

A resolution, suggested by Councilwoman Nancy K. Parker, was adopted Monday by a vote of 7-4 with Councilmen John A. Baum, Harold Heischouer and John L. Perry, and Vice Mayor Robert V. Fentress dissenting. Perry had originally voted with the majority but changed his vote later.

Councilman John D. Moss said that more attention should be paid to the people who are lobbying in Richmond. He said that the bills are promoted by the building industry. What effect will the bills have on the taxpayers? he asked.

The resolution states that the legislation proposed would alter the precedent established by the Supreme Court of Virginia regarding the vesting of certain rights in existing zoning (the point at which the local governing bodies would have no right to change the zoning), and conflicts with the Commonwealth's current enabling legislation empowering municipalities to zone property.

Zoning property is one of the few land use management tools available to municipalities to manage and promote growth consonant with the efficient expenditure of public funds, the resolution points out.

At the same time the Legislature is considering these bills, Parker said, the transfer/purchase of development rights (TDR/PDR), recommended by council, has been placed in a study and will not be considered until next year.

TDR and PDR have been suggested as a way to manage growth in the southern part of the city. The resolution asks that the General Assembly defeat any legislation which restricts the ability of municipalities to zone property.

Moss said that vesting rights is like increasing local taxes. He said that these bills would have more of an impact on taxpayers than the TDR plan.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that Fairfax County's Audrey Moore said the bills would have a devastating effect on localities. Oberndorf said that the bills are not there by accident. She said that Moore was hoping "we would make a strong showing against the bills" which affect the entire structure of local government. She said that it would be a cut back in the control cities and counties now have. She said that conditions would not be permitted on property without the owner's permission.

Moss said he did not think the citizens understand how the bills will affect their quality of life and taxes.

When asked when property owners now have vested rights in their property, City Attorney Leslie Lilley said that the underlying criteria is the expenditure of funds.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley said that the zoning ordinances would have to be changed.

Assistant City Attorney William Macali said that House Bill 1122, known as the Jackson Vesting Bill is beyond anything that has ever been in existence in this century. It says that a landowner's rights shall be vested in his zoning and not affected by a subsequent amendment to the zoning ordinance when the legislative body has accepted propfers or proffered conditions related to a zoning amendment, when the legislative body has granted a special exception with conditions, when a board of zoning appeals or the local governing body has approved a variance with conditions or the landowner in good faith has filed a preliminary or final plat or plan of subdivision, a preliminary or final site plan or plan of development for such landowner's property and he has materially changed his financial position in reliance on such plat or plan. Also, a use which is permitted at the time a landowner acquires a vested right shall not be deemed a nonconforming use in the event a subsequent amendment to the zoning ordinance restricts or precludes that use but shall be a conforming use that is controlled by the zoning ordinance in effect at the time vesting occurs.

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts, Jr. said that the Virginia Municipal League representatives were to be at the hearing on the bills scheduled for 3 p.m. today.

Planning Director Robert Scott said that "no matter how you feel about downzoning" and other provisions that would be affected, the bills may even mean changing regulations on setbacks. He said that he had known the bills were in the wind but that they came to his attention just recently.

Heischouer and Fentress said that they did not know enough about the bills to vote on the resolution. Said Heischouer, "It may be good or bad."

"If you're really clever," said Councilwoman Reba McClanan, "you introduce a bill the day before the deadline," which is what happened in the case of these bills. She said that the Richmond newspapers have taken a stronger stand on the issue.

In another legislative matter, Council is asking that a bill concerning impact fees be amended to include Virginia Beach.

The bill, which will benefit the cities of Chesapeake and Suffolk, will permit impact fees from developers for roads leading to developments as well as roads within developments.

Fairfax already has the authority to set impact fees.

Oberndorf suggested that the bill might be amended to include cities of no less than 350,000, no more than 400,000 population which would pertain only to Virginia Beach.

Moss wondered why the neighboring cities were included in the amendment, but the Beach was left out.

$228,525 In Improvements Approved For Kempsville Greens Golf Course

If the city is to continue in the golf business, it should have some staff persons knowledgeable about golf.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan expressed this point of view before voting against a $228,525 appropriation for improvements at the Kempsville Greens Golf Course.

The expenditure was approved by other members of council, however, and with the support of the Kempsville Greens Civic Association.

Corrective action was required, according to the staff, to improve the safety and aesthetics of the course jeopardized when a developer built homes too close to the course.

The changes to correct the impact of the developer were recommended by the consulting firm of Ault, Clark and Associates, Ltd. They address the initial concerns for protection of adjacent dwelling units at holes #1, #4, #11, #12 and #13. Also, hole #8 was modified to increase the par to accommodate the reduction of the par on hole #1. Improvements at holes #14 through #18 will provide buffering as a protection for other course areas. Alternatives were suggested as a second phase if the initial modifications do not improve the problems at holes #1 and #2.

The money will come from the Golf Course Enterprise Fund which amounts to $620,909. City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. said the money is designated for course improvements.

On the suggestion of residents, council will consider later the installation of netting on the 12th fairway. This would cost an additional $22,000.

"We don't have anybody on the staff trained on golf courses," McClanan said. "Have we done anything to see the same things do not occur again?" She said that the same things were discussed three years ago. She asked whether the city had anyone who has the background to review future golf course applications. "People are asking me questions all the time," she said. For instance, how much land is required for a golf course?

Alfred Whitehurst, director of Parks and Recreation, said that the city does not have anyone specially trained in golf course development, but that the Red Wing and Kempsville Greens courses are in better condition than ever. "We have a good maintenance program." The staff also knows, he said, that 150 acres are needed for a good golf course.

"If we don't have the expertise to deal with them, we shouldn't allow them," McClanan replied.

Whitehurst also said that the course will not be closed during the construction.

Problems first arose in the late spring of 1989 when residents became concerned over the construction adjacent to the course. Changes in the types of homes permitted on some of the parcels had been granted administratively so that the residents were unaware of the changes until the construction was started. Council also was not aware of the changes.

Parent-Child Education Program Designed For Low-Income Homes

Local Social Services and education officials have proposed a parent-child education program designed to prepare children from low-income homes for school.

The program would be modeled after the Avance program in San Antonio which was founded in 1973 as a private non-profit, community-based organization which serves predominantly low-income families living in or near Federal housing projects.

B.J. Williams, of the local Social Services Department said that the local organizers are looking at targeting 30 families which may have three to four children each and a budget of $69,000.

Williams and Ester Coleman, of the Virginia Beach Public Schools, visited the Avance program in San Antonio last May on the suggestion of Councilwoman Nancy Parker who had learned about the program in San Antonio in the fall of 1988.

The program is aimed at helping parents develop skills to prepare their children for a successful school career.

At a recent council workshop, Williams said that in San Antonio program originators had found that the parenting skills of the parents in low-income areas were not adequate and that while preschool programs existed for the four- and five-year olds, work had to be started much earlier. Problems which cropped up in later years, such as dropouts and teenage pregnancy, could be traced back to the early years.

The program would focus on children three and under and their parents. In San Antonio the high Hispanic population was targeted, Virginia Beach does not have a high Hispanic population, Williams said. "But we have a low-income (group) and have parents with low parenting skills."

The program would last nine months, for three hours a day, one day a week.

San Antonio, with a $1 million budget, has approximately 2,000 program participants.

The local committee studying the program consists of Dr. Spiva, Virginia Beach school board; Dr. Edward Brown, executive director to the superintendent of schools; Dr.

The development adjacent to the course had created inoperable land uses.

A staff report states that a precedent has been set in Virginia where golf holes have been closed and golf courses shut down until safety problems are rectified.

On May 22, last year, council directed the city manager to make recommendations to assure that the course and the public at Kempsville Greens are protected.

The work will include transplanting trees, additional landscaping, new tees and bunkers, additional and/or regraded fairways, new greens, relocation of cart paths and netting. Most of the work will be done in the spring and fall, Whitehurst said.

Pearl Moyers, director of the Educational Planning Center; Nancy Parker, and Hector A. Rivera, assistant city manager.

Moyers said that the school system operated a program in Windsor Oaks based on a parent-teacher program in Missouri. Established eight years ago with a budget of $32,000, the program, she said, should be altered to include children from the time they are born to the time they go to school.

She said that parents are taught to do things with children to prepare them for school, such as toy making, reading and taking care of physical problems before starting school.

A program is conducted each month for parents, but is handicapped by lack of funds and could not be extended to the home. She said that the parents in the program want to improve and that the program does not have parents from the lower spectrum.

Moyers said that with the help of the community, the candidates for the program were found in a door-to-door canvass.

Rivera said that the committee is looking for funding for the "Avance" program from the city and other agencies. He said that the committee has not been able to identify state and federal funds for the program. The people targeted are already in the high risk category. Like Headstart, Rivera said, the program does show results.

At present, Williams said, no one addresses the 0-3 age group.

She said that some children have several behavioral problems at the age of five. Starting with them at four is too late, she said.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley congratulated the group for bringing various agencies together in formulating the problem. She said when she first came to council she was struck by the lack of correlation between the various agencies.

The committee is investigating a possible pilot site in the Plaza area, Carper Housing or Twin Canals. Superintendent of schools Carlton Bower reported that the Twin Canals panel has requested that the parent-child education program modeled after Avance be offered to their community.

Adopt-A-Beach Is Cleaning Up The Sand

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

I am very pleased to report that since the establishment of the City of Virginia Beach's Adopt-A-Beach Program, the community response received has been tremendous.

The first phase of the program was limited to Croatan Beach, the Boardwalk Beach and North End Beach. All seven miles of this onfront were adopted during the first two weeks.

The Adopt-A-Beach Program was modeled after the city's Adopt-A-Highway Program, which encourages community organizations and individuals to adopt a one-mile stretch of beach and keep their section litter-free. The volunteers are also encouraged to participate in the city's landscape services division's annual volunteer dune grass planting program to help stabilize Virginia Beach's dune system.

The groups agree to conduct their litter cleanups at least four times per year on a designated day. The designated cleanups coincide with Clean Community Awareness Week in April, Clean the Bay Day in June, National Coast Week in September and National Recycle Month in October.

In return, the city furnishes the volunteers with the necessary materials and supplies and will also post signs at both ends of the adopted group. In addition to the signs publicizing the group responsible for the beach being litter free, the signs also remind all citizens that littering is unacceptable, that our beaches are owned by all of us, and it is everyone's responsibility to remove their litter from our beaches.

The adopting groups are very diverse and I would like to commend each of the adopting groups for their commitment. The first mile of beach was adopted by the Virginia Beach Special Olympics and the other sections by Huntsman Chemical Corporation, The Life Saving Museum of Virginia, The City of Virginia Beach Public Information Office, the 81st Street SSOBS (a volleyball team), the Ramada Oceanside Tower, and Tidewater

Lynnhaven Elementary Students Attend Read-A-Thon Sleepover

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

This week's Virginia Beach Sun article was written by Heidi Magyar, teacher, Lynnhaven Elementary School.

If anyone happened to drive into the car lot at Mega Mazda last Saturday night to browse or drool over the new models, they probably had a real surprise. For instead of shiny new car models in the showroom, they found children, teachers, and PTA adults spread out all over the showroom floor in sleeping bags and folding chairs.

For the second year, Lynnhaven Elementary School, in conjunction with its Adopt-A-School partner, Mega Mazda, have hosted about 30 students for an all night read-a-thon sleepover.

Last year, only fifth and sixth grade students were actively reading for the Battle of the Books program; however, this year it was decided to open up the sleepover to some fourth grade students as well.

Since January was citywide reading month, the school librarian, Ms. Robin Baugh, and the school's reading resource teacher, Mrs. Heidi Magyar, decided to have the sleepover as the Reading Month's culminating activity.

This event is something to which the students look forward all year. Many ask in September if they can spend the night, and there's good reason. Besides the reading time-out periods, where every adult and child is immersed in their book, there are plenty of fun, noisy, more active events as

Abe Lincoln's Message Still Heard Around The World

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

Last fall, I read an article in Parade Magazine by Herbert Kupferberg, who asserted that "After all these years, Abe Lincoln is about to become a best-selling author."

He was referring to Speeches and Writings, by Abraham Lincoln, recently published by The Library of America and taken up by four book clubs. The two volumes contain debates, speeches, political and personal correspondence, even poetry by the 16th president whose birthday anniversary we observe on Monday, Feb. 12.

Lincoln was remembered again a few weeks ago in the January 15 issue of Newsweek. Under the heading, "The Great Moral Stake of the Moment," the editor commented, "Perhaps not since Abraham Lincoln's Second Inaugural has a head of state delivered a speech as searching as Vaclav Havel's New Year's Day address to Czechoslovakia."

Like Lincoln, Havel sought to unify his country by challenging his fellow citizens to face the past but to assume responsibility for their future freedom. "The worst think is that we are living in a decayed moral environment. . . . Notions such as love, friendship, compassion, humility and forgiveness have lost their depth and dimension. . . . We cannot lay all the blame on those who ruled us before. . . . because it could detract from the responsibility each of us now faces. . . . This, it seems to me, is the great moral stake of the present moment.

One hundred twenty-five years ago, Lincoln's thoughts too, were on reuniting his country and healing the wounds of war. The end of the conflict was clearly in sight. Lee's Army was under siege in Petersburg. Sherman had left a wide track of destruction through Georgia and the Carolinas. But Lincoln's thoughts were not on revenge. He recognized that the great moral stake of that moment depended on compassion and forgiveness.

In his address he asked for "malice toward none" and "charity for all," calling on the people "to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphan - to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace."

Lincoln himself bore the scars of the war. Photographs taken of him just after this last inaugural address, March 4, 1865, reveal a gaunt, tired man 400,000 residents and the city liability if it actually took a hand in planning for the event.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan said that if the city took a major role in the planning it would have to abide by State laws such as the bidding process which might delay action.

She said that the city should participate by offering police and fire protection, as it does for other events like the Neptune Festivals, functions which are part of the city function, "but I am not interested in getting into the entertainment business."

The council discussion took place Monday during the first work session on the Labor Day Weekend Review Commission report which was released a week ago.

A chief concern was the short period, seven months, in which to plan for the next Labor Day event.

Oberndorf said that she would like to have directions for the staff by the end of February. But after council members each gave a personal assessment of the report or reports, the staff was instructed to come in next week with answers to more questions that arose during the session.

Here's what the council members said:

William D. Sessions Jr.: "The report was good; council needs to move forward and take things out of the report it wants to pursue. 'Perhaps council, perhaps business, perhaps the black leadership, all should have done a better job. We need to get black leadership involved. We need help in finding leadership from all areas.' He added that he did not want too many groups involved, that the size would have to be controlled. And be sure, he said, that the people council is talking to are the right people.

Sessions added later that he had seen a lot of positive things going on. That he is meeting with ministers on the possibility of having gospel singing on the beach. Somewhere, he said, all the ideas can be put together. He said that next Monday council should get guidance from the staff, and that if an invitation is sent to Governor Douglas Wilder, it should be sent to other black leaders as well.

Nancy Parker: "I would feel more comfortable if someone from the Commission came back to see that we had a thorough understanding. . . . They are not all students who are coming back. They are beyond what we can prepare for."

William L. Perry: "We've been talking to the city for four years and everybody ignored it. . . . Next year will repeat itself."

Perry said that the city had a lot of good black leaders who were not put on the commission and the people who did serve had no idea what happened at the Beach. He repudiated using the expression "improper act" to describe an incident where the police were beating people over the head."

A Commission member, Janet Ballard, submitted a minority report criticizing the Commission's report where the expression "Inappropriate action" was used to describe police action.

Let's look at the positive part," said Perry, not the negative. Let's not say you can't have it just because one door was broken."

Perry said that the crowds should be controlled and that they can be controlled by black leadership. "They're coming here to be on the beach. They're not coming to go to Norfolk State; they don't want to go to Norfolk Scope; they don't want to go to Hampton Coliseum." He said that council has been "sticking our heads in the sand," and that if this attitude continues, "we're going to have trouble."

Reba McClanan: McClanan wanted to know whether the Commission had a legal advisor. (It did not). She said that her questions involve legal matters, and that council has to discuss liability. "Ultimately we are the ones who are responsible. . . . I think the report is good. . . . I don't disagree, but have questions about how much thought was given (on some things). She said that it was one thing for the city to organize a committee to do things, but the liability is different when the city takes over. "Most of the documents (the reports) suggest we do the planning. We need to look strongly at the liability."

McClanan added that when elected officials become involved it changes the nature of the event. "I don't want to be part of it myself," although providing assistance and help is appropriate."

She said it was not council's place to say what should be planned, but to work with another group.

By turning the planning over to a committee such as the Interracial Business and Civic Coalition of Virginia Beach, the city would divest itself of liability. In cases where the city is sued or where council members are sued, she said it is the citizen ultimately who pays.

John A. Baum: He said that the Commission's report was "excellent. . . moderate" and that the council will have more trouble forming a consensus "here and among the public" than the Commission had. He said he doubted council would have a policy in one month. "We're being sued now. To me that's harassment."

City council and its members individually are being sued in U.S. District Court by a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) who was arrested during the Labor Day event. The case was later dismissed.

Barbara Henley: Henley said she sat down with the four reports — the Commission Report, the Beachfront Events Committee Report, the Interracial and Civic Coalition of Virginia Beach report, and the Norfolk State Summit Report, and was struck by what was omitted. She said that the residential area of the resort was not given any consideration in the reports. "I hope we don't rush into appointing a committee; we need to allow for council to discuss the issue. We need a staff report - what they have learned from last year." She said she wanted a staff report

Living History Program Set

The Princess Anne County/Virginia Beach Historical Society will co-sponsor a living history program with the Eloise Hunter Chapter of the Victorian Society in America and the Sixth Virginia Infantry Civil War Re-enactment Group on Saturday, Feb. 10 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the historic Upper Wolfsnare Plantation on Potters Road.

Continuous tours will be approximately 30 minutes long with the last tour beginning at 9 p.m.

Reservations are required. Admission is $10.

The evening will begin with a moonlit ride in a horse-drawn carriage down the drive and through time to Upper Wolfsnare as it was during Victorian times. Guests will arrive to find civil war soldiers encamped on the lawn as protection for General Robert E. Lee who will be staying at the house that evening. Once inside, guests will be guided through rooms where costumed actors will be reenacting the lifestyle and the evening pursuits of the era. After the tour guests will arrive at a reception where they may meet General Robert E. Lee and have an old fashioned photo taken. Coffee and desserts will be provided. Guests will then finish the evening with a carriage ride back to the 20th century.

Admission to this event will be limited to 100 people. It is also recommended that ladies not wear heels any higher than 2 inches for their personal safety and comfort. In the event of rain or snow the program will be held Feb. 17.

For more information and reservations, call Ruth Akright at 491-0127.

Firefighters Hold Basketball Game

The Norfolk and Virginia Beach Professional Firefighters Associations have begun ticket sales for their first Celebrity Combined Basketball Game that the associations will present on Friday, May 11 at Norfolk Scope.

This year's basketball game is scheduled for 8 p.m. and will feature "The Harlem Clowns." Rosey Grier will speak at half-time. He will also be making guest appearances before the game.

Tickets will be sold over the telephone to businesses during the day and to residences in the evening and on Saturdays.

Checks for tickets should be made out to the Norfolk and Virginia Beach Professional Firefighters Associations. Checks and cash from businesses for ticket sales will be picked up by drivers who will have identification from the associations.

Residents' tickets will be delivered through the mail. In order to facilitate payment, Visa and MasterCard may be used.

The proceeds from the show will be deposited into both associations' general funds. Any questions concerning the sale of tickets may be directed to the president of either organization; Norfolk Professional Firefighters Association, Jim Thornton, 461-6099 or Virginia Beach Professional Firefighters Association, Jack Fremieu, 426-6646 (work) or 468-2800 (home). For purchase of tickets, the public may call the ticket office at 483-3622.

Briones To Appear In "Teen"

Rhissa Briones, 15, of Meadowbridge Lane, will appear in TEEN Magazine's February issue as a Great Model Search regional semifinalist.

Of the approximately 24,000 entries received annually, only 480 are chosen as regional semifinalists. That's 16 per region for five months. The field is then narrowed to 96 super semifinalists. And finally to 12 finalists. The finalists receive an all-expense paid trip to the National Finals.

The 1990 Great Model Search winner will receive a $5,000 cash award from Maybelline (R) and will appear in a national Maybelline ad! Also a trip for two to a resort area from Tropical Blend (R). And a wardrobe of elegant formals from Mike Benet Formals. Plus modeling opportunities with the program's sponsors.

The winner will appear on the cover of the October issue of

Rhissa Briones

TEEN. If Rhissa wins, she will be in a long line of successful models who have launched their careers on TEEN's cover. Past TEEN's discoveries include Cheryl Tiegs, Cristina Ferrare and Kelly Harmon.

Kelly Brothers Teaches At Flight School

By Dwight E. Sheed
Special To The Sun

Naval aviation has always been part of Kelly R. Brothers' life.

"My father retired as a master chief aviation fire control technician with 31 years of service," explained Lt. Brothers. "I was always around naval aviation as a kid and it really interested me."

Brothers, the son of Robert and Martha Brothers, attributes being reared in a naval aviation environment as the reason why he "caught the bug" to become a pilot.

"My father worked around planes all the time," he says. "Occasionally, he would take me on the job with him so it was only natural that my interest in aircraft would be heightened."

The 1979 Frank W. Cox High School graduate is now an instructor at Training Squadron SIX (VT-6), based at Naval Air Station Whiting Field, Milton, Fla. At VT-6, he trains student naval aviators in primary and intermediate aircraft training. The fledgling aviators receive instruction in basic instrument, precision aerobatics, formation and radio instruments.

After the completion of primary training, selections are made for further instruction in strike, maritime or helicopter aircraft missions. Students selected for strike training are assigned to intermediate jet squadrons while prospective maritime and helicopter pilots remain at VT-6 for intermediate training.

Brothers' goal of becoming an aviator led him to attend Brown University where he received a degree mechanical engineering degree. In August 1983, he was accepted into the Aviation Officer's Candidate School in Pensacola, Fla. where he became part of a growing group of a minority college graduates who have become naval aviators.

"The challenges of being a pilot are interesting," he says. "I like flying a lot. I can't think of anything more fun. Doing aerobatics and being tested under stressful situations is exciting; besides," smiles. "When you're a pilot the trust you with the airplane."

NAS Oceana Receives Take Pride In America Award

Naval Air Station Oceana recently received a 1989 Take Pride in America Award from the Honorable John W. Daniel, II, Secretary of Natural Resources, Virginia Department of Conservation and Recreation.

The award was for outstanding contributions to Virginia's natural and cultural resources in the federal government category.

The Take Pride in America Awards program is an annual state campaign which recognizes individuals and public and private groups that conduct outstanding stewardship actions or awareness efforts on behalf of federal, state, and local natural and cultural resources.

The goals in the Take Pride in America campaign are to:

- ✓ Increase awareness of the importance of wise use of public lands and natural and cultural resources.
- ✓ Encourage an attitude of stewardship and responsibility toward public lands and resources.
- ✓ Promote participation by individuals, organizations, and communities in caring for public lands and resources.

Naval Air Station Oceana was nominated by Atlantic Division,

Naval Facilities Engineering Command, natural resources staff under the category, "federal government." Oceana received the award for efforts in energy conservation, recycling program, bluebird nest box program, endangered species survey, hunting/fishing program, firewood reclamation and sales program, Chesapeake Bay Program, Clean the Bay Day - 1989, Operation Sunburst - 1988, and Naval Auxiliary Landing Field (NALF) Festress efforts in the Boy Scout Camporee - 1989.

Oceana will be among the entries representing the Commonwealth of Virginia in the Take Pride in America national campaign and will compete against other federal agencies from other states.

Arts And Culture

Folks Music Concert Held At Virginia Beach Center For Arts

Virginia musicians Madeline MacNeil and Seth Austen will be featured in concert on Sunday, Feb. 18 at 3 p.m., at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts.

Their program, American to Celtic: An Afternoon of Folk Music, combines songs and instrumentals with the hammered dulcimer, mountain dulcimer, acoustic guitar and synthesizer.

MacNeil and Austen's repertoire entertains audiences of all ages, ranging from 16th-century Celtic carols to 20th century Appalachian melodies. Throughout the concert, MacNeil explains the history of the instruments and tells colorful anecdotes about classical and folk musicians who have mastered them.

MacNeil has recorded five albums and her work is critically acclaimed as a rare blend of traditional folk enhanced with contemporary style. She is also editor and publisher of Dulcimer Player News, an international quarterly journal established in 1975.

Seth Austen is a national recording acoustic guitarist, composer, producer and teacher. He is versed in string music, blues, ragtime, folk, classical, jazz and the avant-garde.

From 1982 to 1983, Austen was musical director for Wayside Theatre in Middletown, Va., where he arranged and performed musical stage productions. Since 1984 he has taught at the National Guitar Summer Workshop in New Milford, Conn. and elsewhere throughout the east coast.

MacNeil and Austen have performed at the International Children's Festival, Wolftrap Center for the Performing Arts, Virginia; Summer Solstice Music Festival, Beverly Hills, Ca.; Walnut Valley Festival, Kan.; the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.; Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond; Appalachian State University, N.C.; and in Maryland, Kentucky, Maine, Georgia, Arizona, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

American to Celtic: An Afternoon of Folk Music is the first program in a series of four performing arts events, titled The Living Arts, and organized by the Center for the Arts. This premiere series is partially funded with grants from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

The Living Arts showcases nationally recognized solo and group performers excelling in the fields of music, dance, theater and visual arts. The Living Arts is a sampling of performance programs scheduled February to June for audiences of all ages and experience.

MacNeil and Austen's concert is in the Price Auditorium. Admission is $3 for VBCA members, $5 for nonmembers, payable at the door.

Children six and under are free. Reservations are not necessary, but may be made with advance payment. For ticket information or a series brochure, telephone the Center for the Arts at 425-0000.

The Center for the Arts is located at the corner of 22nd Street and Park Avenue, across from the Pavilion Convention Center, seven blocks from the oceanfront.

Winter Escapades Announced

Art & Company, the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts' membership group for people ages 21 through 39, announces its Winter Escapades.

The $40 per person black-tie dance will be held on Saturday, Feb. 24 at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts. Proceeds will help support the center's schedule of exhibitions and educational programs.

Art & Company was formed to promote the center by organizing events for the social and cultural development of the group and the community. In its first year, Art & Company has hosted gallery talks, lecture and slide shows, outdoor concerts at the Center and trips to art galleries throughout the area. The group now has 150 members.

It is anticipated that attendance at Winter Escapades will exceed 350. Emile Labau and the Beach Blasters will entertain the crowd with a variety of Motown, beach music, and Top 40 hits. The $40 ticket price also includes four complimentary drink tickets and a great assortment of hors d'oeuvres.

Boardwalk Poster Contest Begins

Virginia Beach Center for the Arts has announced that the 1990 Boardwalk Art Show poster competition is now underway.

The poster competition is held annually and is open to students K-12 in all Virginia Beach schools, as well as private schools in Norfolk with a high percentage of Virginia Beach students. It is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts. Each school may enter two finalists. The deadline for entries is Friday, March 30 at 4 p.m.

VIRGINIA: In the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach, on the 9th day of January, 1990.

In re: Adoption of JENNIFER SUE POORE

By: HAROLD EUGENE DAVIS, JR., AND SUSAN ALANE DAVIS, Petitioners
To: DAVID L. POORE, JR., 1206 Longhorn Way, RR 11, Billings, Montana 59105

IN CHANCERY #CA90-1

ORDER OF PUBLICATION
This day came HAROLD EUGENE DAVIS, JR., AND SUSAN ALANE DAVIS, Petitioners, and represented that the object of this proceeding is to effect the adoption of the above named infant, JEN-NIFER SUE POORE by HAROLD EUGENE DAVIS, JR., and SUSAN ALANE DAVIS, husband and wife, and affidavit having been made and filed that DAVID L. POORE, a natural parent of said child, is a non-resident of the State of Virginia, the last known post office address being 1206 Longhorn Way, RR 11, Billings, Montana, 59105.

It is therefore Ordered that the said DAVID L. POORE appear before this Court within ten (10) days after publication of this Order and indicate his attitude toward the proposed adoption, or otherwise do what is necessary to protect his interest in this matter.

It is further Ordered that a copy of this order be published once each week for four successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in this city.

with a deeply-lined face and eyes ringed with black. A sensitive man, he had suffered with his men as they died or were maimed or imprisoned. He felt deeply for the women deprived of husbands or sons.

He had also had his personal tragedies. His son, William Wallace, had died a year after his first inauguration. His wife, who had close relatives in the Confederate Army, was suspected of being disloyal to the Union. Nor was Lincoln spared. He was criticized for violating civil liberties during the war.

Still, he had continued for four years to expound the aims of the war. Probably the supreme expression of his conception of democracy was formulated in the brief address he made at the dedication of the military cemetery at Gettysburg, Pa., November 29, 1863. On that occasion, he reminded the citizens that our nation, conceived in liberty, was "dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

We cannot recall Lincoln's birthday anniversary without remembering his tragic death. He was as much a victim of the war as any of the soldiers killed on the battlefield. Just over a month after taking his oath of office for the second time, he was slain by an assassin. While attending a play at Ford's Theater in Washington, on April 14, 1865, he was shot by the actor John Wilkes Booth, and died early the next morning.

He did not live to see his Emancipation Proclamation of New Year's Day 1863 become a reality for all former slaves. But the Thirteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution was ratified on December 6, 1865, the year he died.

Immediately after his death, Lincoln became something of a folk hero, almost an American saint. Now, according to Paul M. Angle, "Americans are coming to see Lincoln as utterly human but with towering virtues, while in many countries, as well as in the United States, he is looked up as the finest product of democracy and as its greatest exponent."

Note: The new collection of Lincoln's Speeches and Writings has been ordered by the Virginia Beach Library and will be available for the public in the near future. It is also available at the Chesapeake Headquarters Library on Cedar Road.

well. A musical encore game was played with two teams. The popular Scattergories game caused furious competition. Mad-Libs and small group board games broke up the silent reading times.

Close to midnight the group was entertained by scary stories told by Mrs. Magyar.

Throughout the night, food is a constant theme. Tons of food for what typical kids love to do — constantly eat! The group had donations of Freshens yogurt, ice cream, Krispy Kreme donuts, and pizza discounted by Pizza Hut and paid for by Mega Mazda, along with several cases of soda, plus lots of snacks donated by Lynnhaven teachers.

Throughout the night, prizes were given for free McDonald's hamburgers and french fries, free bowling games at Lynnhaven Bowling Center, and goodies from the treasure box were drawn.

Did anyone sleep? Most of the group was still going strong at 4:45 in the morning. Principal William Skaggs never slept a wink and had to sleep most of Sunday to rest up for the Super Bowl game.

A chalkboard kept the running totals of pages read by the group, with the grand total of 2,996 pages on the board by the next morning. One child quickly sat down with his juice and doughnuts, read four more pages to round it out to an even 3,000.

One of the comments made by Assistant Principal Ed Gibbs sums up the feelings by most of the sleepover participants. "This kind of activity really brings the students and staff together and allows them to see one another in more personal terms."

filthy, it's immoral," he said. "The poor you will have with you always. In Virginia Beach we don't want people who make less than $50,000 a year. I get so disgusted and ready to quit."

Ustick agrees with Perry that the improvements have been slow getting started, but she said racism has

"They're never going to improve them. They've promised them curbs, gutters, sewer and water." — Councilman John L. Perry nothing to do with it. She said there were several improvement delays a few years ago and because of those delays and the increasing rate of inflation, the projects, when they finally get underway, are more costly.

"We're all frustrated with how slow it's been. We just run into so many problems in the target areas," she said.

Perry said the $7,500 is not nearly enough to do the improvements. He said it will take $250,000 just to repair Burton Station, because the neighborhood has no water sewers or curbs.

"We're one of the few cities who spends all their CDBG money in the target neighborhoods. The biggest problem is trying to get to all of them," Ustick said.

Ustick added that the streets of Seateck should be permanently repaired within six to nine months. Burton Station, however, may take a few years. The city recently got the bid for $3.9 million worth of repairs to Newsome Farms for streets and drainage.

"All the streets will finally be improved," she said.

The money for repairs was taken from 13th year Community Development Block Grant Funds.

Most of the people who frequent the beach are locals. Most of them probably live at the North End. There's not much to do at the beach; there are no restaurants or food stands, but there is plenty of sand and surf.

Virginia Beach residents who want to enjoy the sun should consider visiting Ft. Story. It's a perfect place to bring the family and make a day of it. — K.L.D.

Labor Day

on what was done the year the event was successful in 1987. She said that the questions on the city's liability should be asked as well as the Constitutional question of a possible lack of liability. She said that she did not see any recommendation on how to control crowds except in the Norfolk State report.

"The citizens feel there is a threat," she said. She pointed out that a large part of the population does not support the event and the citizens should be made to feel that they are part of the activities "or we will have problems." The Interracial Business and Civic Coalition or whoever ends up with the planning has to recognize there are people on both sides, she said. "We have 400,000 (people) in this city and we can't say that 350,000 have to stay indoors..." She said that the activities should be something the whole community can participate in. "We've got to get away from a confrontation attitude. We need to make clear the concerns and desires of the full community."

Harold Heischhofer: "I think the report is kind of all parties involved." From the telephone calls he gets, he said, he has learned that the "population feels council can in fact take control of the situation and wish Labor Day Weekend away... I wish that was so, but in the real world it is that it is not the prerogative of council that it will go away..." He said that now too many groups are acting independently, "but I do not feel we should relegate the overseeing on what should be done to any committee or commission. We are the ultimate leaders. We should ask for help of all groups." He said that Baum said that he is troubled over the fact that council is going to have to spend money on a lawsuit. But if the city takes over the event, he said, it may be liable, not only to the visitors, but to its own citizens, its own shop owners because "we haven't made a safe city. It hurts everybody..."

Do we really have the time? That's what bothers me... We have a very, very difficult situation that we can't spend more time on reports and more input... I firmly believe the mayor has the ability to pull the affair together and am willing to assist... Seven months is not a long time... This is not an easy situation.

Later he mentioned problems with limited geography and logistics. "Do we believe we can pleasantly deter the students? 'Make it a weekend all can be proud of. We need to pull this thing together.' He said that it was a fact "we did not exercise prudent leadership. We learned from the past, and hope to make it a week that is successful and to avoid confrontations."

Heischhofer suggested getting a contact person from each of the groups that have submitted reports. He said that the people taking part in the Labor Day event are not all students. They are uncomfortable with the others and getting the bad rap.

Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress: Fentress said that the staff should report on what positive actions should be taken for the 1990 event. He suggested using the five general recommendations in the Commission's report as a format and dividing those things that belong with the private sector and with the city administration. "City council ultimately will be responsible for what happens in this city, although he feels that coordination is necessary between the private sector, the city, the staff and council. He said that Labor Day 1990 can be a very positive event.

Fentress said that there was no reason to think the students were not coming back. Whether they will be in Virginia Beach or in other areas will not be determined by us, he said.

Albert Balko: Balko said that he heard that the more than 100,000 were coming to the event this year. "Can we handle it regardless of (what kind of ethnic group is involved)? Can we accommodate them?" He said that Atlantic Avenue could be closed on Saturday and Sunday and the possibility that the Federal government will allow the use of Camp Pendleton is still an attractive alternative. He said that the fraternity presidents should be involved in security matters. He said that the problem with the hotels and motels is that they do not have enough help to handle the influx. He said, however, that council should get together something soon and not dawdle around.

John D. Moss: Moss said that the council needs a staff assessment, including legal, logistical, financial and political concerns. He said he wanted to know whether changes will be needed in city ordinances and policies. "It's also important that we don't allow ourselves to define leadership by what's on television. There is a lack of leadership if we haven't learned our lesson. Be prepared and that's our obligation."

Moss also said, that "we had more responsible leadership (during the 1989 event) than the press indicated." He said that he did not think a committee was needed because people are looking to council for decisions. He said that he has heard citizens say they would spend money on police protection but not on entertainment. He suggested that council eliminate what it is not willing to do in the way of funding, what the council will have to do regarding liability, and how accessible any committee would be to residents.

This week, the bus America has been waiting for is arriving in Virginia.

Soon, a promising new answer in America's drive to clean up our air will be taking to the streets in Virginia.

At special ceremonies in towns served by Commonwealth Gas Services, a totally new type of city bus will be introduced. It looks and performs like a conventional bus, but is very unconventional in how it cuts down exhaust emissions. It significantly reduces harmful pollutants, and virtually eliminates particulates from the exhaust.

The bus, conceived by the Columbia Gas System, is America's first to be built from the drawing board up to run on clean-burning natural gas.

Its development was coordinated and co-funded by Columbia Gas as part of the company's continuing research program. The goal: finding new, more environmentally-safe energy answers.

In this case, the result is a bus that will help make our cities' air cleaner and safer. And help us breathe a little easier about our future.

As a proud part of the Columbia Gas System, Commonwealth Gas Services will be showing this fine example of leadership in environmental efforts at these company locations:

Manassas	Monday, February 12	9:00 a.m.
Fredericksburg	Monday, February 12	2:00 p.m.

Petitions, Disclosures, Forms All A Part Of Running

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Although the total number of potential candidates for the May 1 councilmanic elections was not readily available from the State Board of Elections, three people, incumbent Al Balko and challengers John O. Parmele and Stanley Harrell have already filed their positions.

There are six council members running for reelections, Balko, Barbara Henley, John Moss, Nancy Parker, John Perry and Will Seesoms, and an unknown number of challengers. Those running must obtain a petition packet from either Clerk of the Circuit Court J. Curtis Fruit or from the State Board of Elections. The petitions, which must contain 125 signatures, must be accompanied by a Declaration of Candidacy and filed with Fruit by March 6. The signatures on the petition must be of qualified voters of the election district. The State Board recommends that a candidate obtain at least half again as many signatures as required to assure a sufficient number of persons who are qualified voters.

All candidates are required to file pre-election Reports of Campaign Contributions and Expenditures with the Electoral Board of the city. The schedule on which these reports must be filed may be found in the Summary of the Fair Elections Practices Act published by the State Board.

Other reports that must be filed are: Certificate of Candidate Qualification, with the State Board by March 9; Appointment of Campaign Treasurer, with the city electoral board by March 6; and a Statement of Economic Interests with the clerk of the circuit court, by March 9.

Any successful candidates must file with the city clerk, a second statement of Economic Interests are required by the Code of Virginia, prior to taking office, and annually thereafter by Jan. 15 of each year. All forms must be received by the appropriate office by the filing deadline. Postmarks are not acceptable. Any person who fails to file all the forms by the deadline shall not have his name printed on the

Residents Should Voice Toll Opinions

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Virginia Beach citizens, who have the only toll road in Hampton Roads area, should be given a chance to express their thoughts on whether or not the toll should be continued to help finance the proposed Southeastern Expressway, Councilman John D. Moss said Monday.

At his suggestion, council adopted a resolution requesting the General Assembly to defer any modification to the statute authorizing the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway/State Route 44 until public hearings are held at the local level and until the State has made a commitment to build the Southeastern Expressway.

The vote was 7-2 with Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress and Councilman William D. Sessions dissenting. Councilman Harold Heischberger had left the Chamber shortly before the vote and Councilman John A. Baum had left earlier.

Last week the State Senate voted 37-1 to approve an open-ended extension of the 25-cent toll on Route 44 with the sole vote against the bill, submitted by Sen. Clarence A. Holland, D-Virginia Beach. Beach, cast by Sen. Mark L. Earley, R-Chesapeake.

Moss said that the State had made a commitment to the citizens to life the tolls in 1992, after 20 years of tolls to pay for the facility. He pointed out that it was the only toll road in Hampton Roads and that the General Assembly initiated the legislation without hearings.

After the debt on 44 is paid in 1992, the toll proceeds, under the proposed legislation, would be used to support construction of the Southeastern Expressway through Chesapeake and Virginia Beach which would cost as much as $500 million. The Expressway also would be a toll facility.

When the bill reaches the house, it is expected to face the opposition of House Del. Glenn B. McClanahan, D-Virginia Beach, who pointed out that there is no consensus among Virginia Beach residents that the Expressway is needed.

In other General Assembly matters, the council voted 8-1 to have Assistant City Attorney William Macali represent the city in opposition to House Bill 677 which requires that conditional use permits not be used to regulate, control or prohibit the subdivision of land or residential density.

Fentress voted against the council action. Heischberger and Baum were absent.

If the bill were passed, the city's Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance would no longer be able to provide that single-family dwellings are conditional uses in the AG-1 Agricultural District, the Agricultural Lands Overlay District Ordinance would no longer be able to provide

Council To Consider Interracial Business And Civil Coalition Labor Day Weekend

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A proposal to use the Interracial Business and Civic Coalition of Virginia Beach as a nucleus for a Labor Day Coordinating Committee will be considered by city council next Monday.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf Monday at a work session invited other council members to submit alternate proposals as well.

Oberndorf, in a three-day resolution she read to council Monday, suggested that council appoint the committee and later acknowledge that the Interracial Business and Civic Coalition of Virginia Beach could serve as that committee with some additional members appointed by Council. The co-chairman of the Coalition, Mary Redd, executive director of the Urban League of Hampton Roads, Inc., and Kal Kassir, chairman of the Resort Leadership Council, later at the formal council session volunteered the services of the coalition as a coordinating committee with additional members appointed by council.

Redd pointed out that the Coalition, formed last October by the Urban League and the Resort Leadership Council, consists of Virginia Beach citizens and are therefore not only concerned about what happens on Labor Day weekend 1990 but are taxpayers. She said that the Coalition is not saying the city should plan events, but that it should help make them possible. "We want to help you."

Kassir pointed out that since the Coalition is already in place it could provide a nucleus for a coordinating committee.

Neither Redd, nor Kassir, nor a student member of the Coalition, Arthur Jarrett, Jr., could say how many visitors, black students from a number of states and others the assembly might attract, to prepare for.

Jarrett, a scholarship student at Norfolk State University, estimated about 100,000, the same number reported to have attended the 1989 celebration which ended in riots and looting.

Council members, however, gave no indication they were interested in appointing a committee at all. There was some confusion about whether the committee would be a city agency or a private agency.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said that she did not intend to vote to appoint any group. Councilman John L. Perry maintained that the Labor Day visitors should be treated like any other group that comes to the beach.

Oberndorf said that she had used as background for her resolution a review submitted by City Manager Aubrey V. Watts, Jr., at the direction of council. The information in the report consists of a compilation of four reports submitted on the Labor Day weekend as well as a summary of comments made by council on the reports and possible steps that council could take for Labor Day 1990.

Since the resolution was prepared prior to the briefing in an executive session Monday by City Attorney Leslie Lilley on the city's potential liability in various scenarios, the resolution was referred to him for reexamination.

Oberndorf said that she was looking for some response from council, that if someone could come up with another idea with goals that could be accomplished more easily, she would welcome the opportunity. She said that Labor Day 1990 could not move forward without agreement from at least six council members.

McClanahan asked whether Oberndorf intended for the Coalition to be the committee appointed by council. Oberndorf said that she did with a few more people.

"An expanded committee?" persisted McClanahan. The Coalition has 34 members.

Oberndorf said that she would be delighted if any council member comes up with another proposal but that council needed something to start a dialogue.

The resolution calls for the creation of a Labor Day Bi-Racial Coordinating Committee to plan and

General District Court Judge Tom Ammons, A Community Volunteer, Can Be Found On Weekends At The SPCA Bathing Dogs

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

During the week Tom Ammons spends his time in a court room as a general district court judge, but once the weekend rolls around he can be found at the Virginia Beach SPCA up to his elbows in soap suds.

A member of the SPCA's board of directors for about one year, Ammons, 46, has been volunteering every Saturday for six months at the shelter on Holland Road.

"I like dogs so much. I want to make sure while the animals are there they're comfortable and well cared for," he said.

Ammons' main job is to bathe the dogs at the SPCA. On a typical day, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., he said he might wash as many as 12 dogs. The baths take place in a grooming room which features a bathtub which is elevated two to three feet off the floor. Larger dogs, such as Great Danes, are washed outside, if the weather permits.

"If the dogs are clean and look good, their chances of getting adopted are much better," Ammons said.

Ammons said he has never been attacked or bitten by a dog while bathing them. Because he has two dogs of his own, black Lab mixers that he adopted from the shelter, Ammons said he had already perfected the bathing technique.

"They are remarkably nice. Almost never do you run into an ill-tempered dog," he said.

Ammons said because the dogs at the SPCA are so appealing, it's not hard to become attached to them.

Junior High Homework Hotline Open

Virginia Beach public schools will offer a homework hotline. The hotline is a four-days-a-week service of junior high school English and mathematics teachers.

Based at Salem Junior High School, three phone lines have been established for the hotline, which is open from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays during the school year. Three people staff the phones each night: One to direct incoming calls, one to help with English homework problems and one to aid in mathematics difficulties. The number to call is 473-5215.

In this, the program's first year, seventh, eighth, and ninth grade English and mathematics are the only subjects being covered. Current plans call for additional core subjects and grade levels to be included in future years. Next year plans call for the inclusions of science and the expansion of the service to students in grades one through six. High school students and subjects will also be included later.

Two independent paths converged to create the homework hotline. Acting upon a 1986 request to create a hotline from Virginia Beach Junior High School Guidance Department Chairman Bill Fitzgerald (then a guidance counselor at Kempsville Junior High), a seven-person study committee was formed in 1987.

From that committee came a plan to implement a hotline for the entire school division over several

Due To Opposing Citizens, Little Neck Fire Station Project Is Pushed Back

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

An outpouring of opposition to the location of the Little Neck Fire Station on a site on Oxford Road has pushed the project back until alternatives are considered.

On the motion of Lynnhaven Borough Councilman Albert Balko, city council Monday unanimously voted to defer plans for the project, directing the City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. to look at alternative sites.

"There's always a possibility," however, said Balko, "that council may come back to the site."

Council acquired the 9.24-acre site known as Brill Field in 1983 to use as a recreational field and a fire station site. The land cost $700,000 and its purchase presented an attractive alternative for the residents to a shopping center. The fire station, a one-bay facility, would be located on .7 acre of the parcel. The site is located at the corner of Oxford Drive and King's Grant Road. Four soccer fields are located elsewhere on the site.

Relocation of the fire station to another location would require an additional expenditure to purchase the land, possibly over $200,000, according to staff.

Fire Chief Harry E. Diezel said the city has already incurred design and architectural fees. The station would contain approximately 6,000 square feet, would be constructed of brick and designed to be architecturally compatible with the surrounding neighborhood.

Residents say they want the fire station but not at that location. They say that the station would be located on a main road and not a residential street, that the location of the station there will create a safety hazard for the people in the neighborhood, the thousands of people who use the recreational facilities and to the firemen.

Some residents support the project. Jack Jennings, a former city council member who lives in King's Grant, said that if the city had not purchased the property for a fire station and recreation center, it would have been a shopping center. He said that regardless of where the station is located, "we would have a NIMBY (not in my backyard) situation. A change now," he said, "would break the continuity of what has been planned for five years."

James Worrissey said he agreed with Jennings. He said that all he has heard is Little Neck and Kingston, but that several other areas would be served by the station and that Diezel emphasized that a five-minute answering time was important.

R. Glenn Bashford, of King's Grant, said, however, that increased growth in the area changed the circumstances. He said that he was aware of the acute need for a sta-

Valentine's Treats

Blowing Diets With Candy

For those of you in the Virginia Beach community who are trying to diet, this week may be a good one to stray from starvation. It's Valentine's Day, which means boxes of candy; all kinds of candy.

Chocolate is especially popular this time of year. Chocolate filled with nuts, caramel, cherries, coconut... the list goes on. It's impossible to get away from. No matter how many people you tell not to get you candy, the infamous box still arrive somehow. How many people do you know who will let a heart-shaped box of candy sit there and go bad? Probably none.

The second most popular Valentine's Day gift is flowers. Once again, this gift can be given in any number of ways, shape or form, although roses are probably given most frequently.

Flowers are gorgeous, while they are alive, which usually isn't for very long. They die and turn brown and you throw they away. With the cost of roses these days, it seems like a waste. But it's the thought that counts.

Another Valentine's Day gift is stuffed animals. Bears holding hearts, bunnies dressed in red and white clothes; all of them saying "I Love You." Stuffed animals seem like the most practical gift, that is, unless you are into more extravagant Valentine's Day gifts. If that is the case, diamonds, VCRs and stereos will probably be much appreciated!

Whatever the gift, be it a box of candy, a bouquet of flowers or a card, it is the thought that counts. Valentine's Day is the perfect chance to tell your loved ones exactly how you feel about them. — K.L.D.

Who's Filing?

Petition Filing Deadline March 6

The 1990 councilmanic election is three months away. The deadline for turning in petitions is three weeks away. As of last week, only three of the potential candidates had filed their petitions yet with the clerk of the circuit court.

These people must have picked up their petitions early, gathered their 125 signatures and turned them back in quickly. They must be pretty sure they are going to run. Surely, several people who pick up petitions will have a change of heart. Maybe some will realize that holding an official office is not their cup of tea. Or maybe they will realize that it may be a waste of time and money to complete with someone who's already been on council four terms. Maybe even though a person wishes to have some kind of input on the city's decision making, he could not imagine working so closely with certain people already in office.

Whatever the reason, most likely not all of those who obtained petitions will run.

The public will know who will be running on March 6, after the petitions have been filed. It is then up to the public to make its decision and vote. For those not registered to vote, call your city registrar and ask for voter registration locations throughout the city. — K.L.D.

A Valentine's Day Message From Virginia Beach's Mayor

The Mayor's Report
Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

Like most holidays and observances, Valentine's Day holds many meanings for many different people in the Virginia Beach community.

Our Valentine's Day tradition includes the exchange of cards and gestures of love. In other countries, however, Valentine's Day has also been celebrated by the exchange of gloves (a symbol of an impending engagement ring), the secret delivery of sweets to children, and even the drawing of a Valentine's name out of a box.

My first thought on Valentine's Day, of course, is of my valentine, my husband Roger. There could not have been a better name to draw from any Valentine box than his. Our love and the strength of our partnership gives me the inspiration and the energy to accept the challenges that each day brings.

Valentine's Day brings thoughts of my other loved ones — friends, family members and associates in our community. It also brings to mind the community unity produced by citizens working together in partnership toward common goals for Virginia Beach.

In a community as diverse as ours, it is essential for us to work together in order to achieve excellence. Public/private partnerships generate incredible results. Fortunately, in Virginia Beach, it is easy to list ways that partnerships have benefited the community. The Methane Recovery Plant is a good example, which by the way, was recently commended by President George Bush in session of the United States Conference of Mayors that I attended. I can't begin to express the pride I felt in our community when he mentioned Virginia Beach. It is because of a public/private partnership that this plant exists at our landfill. The private company that built the plant at the city landfill uses harmful landfill gases to create electricity. That partnership helps conserve resources and helps us protect the fragile ozone layer.

The Labor Day Review Commission is another recent partnership that merged the talents and experience of a cross-section of people into an ef-

Are We On The Right Track With Our Students?

The VBEA Report
By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

I was in the committee meeting on restructuring middle level grades several weeks ago when one of the questions posed by a curriculum specialist was should the system intentionally do away with tracking when middle schools are instituted, in 1992, in Virginia Beach? The attention of the entire group picked up, particularly the teacher representatives in the group. We have tracked children in schools for a long time and it shd to imagine how it could be done any other way. More importantly, we must understand why we should stop tracking students. Our group assignment was to review the research and be prepared to debate the issue at our next meeting.

Several days after the meeting, I flipped through my "Journal of Virginia Education" published by the Virginia Education Association and found a well written article on the very subject. I'm going to give this week's readers a true-false test on some of the assumptions about tracking that the authors and the article emphasized.

Please read each statement carefully and mark T if you believe the statement to be true and F if you believe the statement to be false.

1. "Low-track students learn small things better than they learn large things."
2. "Skills are developed in a sequence, from lower-order to higher-order thinking skills."

We have tracked children in schools for a long time and it is hard to imagine how it could be done any other way. More importantly, we must understand why we should stop tracking students.

3. "Skills must be mastered before content."
4. "Students of varying abilities learn best in homogeneous groups or groups with students with similar abilities."
5. "Students with lower abilities are shielded from unfair competition if they are placed in a group consisting only of similar students."
6. "Current assessment techniques fairly and accurately reflect both ability and achievement."
7. "Teachers can teach homogeneous groups more efficiently."

The DAR Is Celebrating George Washington's Birthday

From Lill's Quill
By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Consultant

Since its inception 100 years ago, the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution has faithfully celebrated Washington's Birthday. The 1890s have been called naughty, gay, the Gaslight Era and the Gilded Age, but few are aware that it was also the dawn of women's clubs, especially hereditary organizations.

Following the centennial events commemorating the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, a wave of patriotism swept the land. There was a renewed interest in the nation's history and heritage, and individuals began to search for their own roots.

These observances also reminded the citizens that the country had stopped celebrating historic events, such as the Fourth of July and Washington's Birthday, and had neglected to preserve sites associated with the nation's beginnings. 1890 was the year of the founding of the largest patriotic society for women, the Daughters of the American Revolution, which sought to remedy these oversights.

The Daughters first celebrated Washington's Birthday on Feb. 22, 1891 in Washington with a gala reception, at which the new president general of the National Society and first lady, Mrs. Benjamin Harrison were received. For many years thereafter, the DAR held its Continental Congress in February to honor the memory of the first president.

The annual George Washington Birthday luncheon will be held at the Holiday Inn on 39th Street and Atlantic, on Saturday, Feb. 17 at noon.

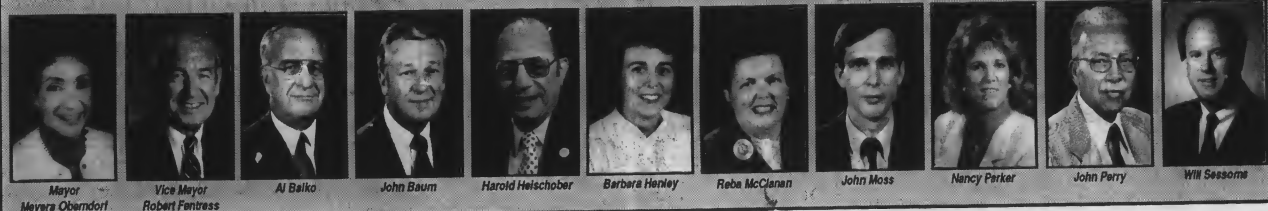

Chapters and state societies of the DAR were encouraged to commemorate Washington's birthday with special events in their areas. At first, local Tidewater chapters celebrated individually. Then, in 1953, several chapters met jointly for a patriotic program on the Saturday closest to the 22nd of February.

This tradition has continued for the past 37 years. However, the time has changed to the Saturday during the three-day weekend, which, unfortunately, never falls on the traditional date. Nor is this event being celebrated in the traditional way by the public. In 1990, George Washington's birthday will be observed by most citizens as a "celebration" rather than a celebration.

But members of DAR chapters from five cities - Chesapeake, Smith-stage events for the weekend. It asks for cooperation from surrounding Hampton Roads cities as well as schools and the business community.

The committee would solicit private funding for events and would be planning and staging the type and size of the events.

The committee would be expected to report back to council weekly with progress reports, something that Redd and Kassir later agreed to.

The members of the committee would serve with no compensation and would be dissolved on Nov. 15.

Any funds necessary would be solicited from private sources and the city would not be bound to any contract or indebtedness. The final finance statement would have to be submitted to the council on Nov. 15. The city attorney would serve as legal advisor.

The committee would call on all resources of the city to make the program a success and to bring together the broadest possible community involvement, including public schools, city departments, voluntary agencies and the business community.

Oberndorf said the resolution is an outgrowth of meeting with people and from the four reports.

Vice Chairman Robert E. Pentress asked whether the committee would be a city agency or in the private sector.

Lilley said that it would be a city agency similar to any other committee appointed by council.

Oberndorf said that unless the committee reported to council, council would not be aware of the specifics. She said that numerous people are willing to step forward but are looking for a mandate from council.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley asked that the city attorney analyze the resolution.

Watts' review includes a Special Events Planning Handbook to guide sponsors of large and small events. To facilitate the process, a special events coordinator and special events task force have been established. The guide would pertain to all special events, including the Labor Day weekend.

He said that the guide does not reflect any policy changes and is a reference that anyone coming into the city can use.

Councilman John D. Moss suggested that if the committee were approved by Council only the chairman should make statements to the media.

Council also agreed to invite Gov. Douglas Wilder to the weekend affair and to follow the suggestion of Councilman Harold Heischhofer to ask Senators Clarence Holland and Moody Stalings to extend the invitation.

Oberndorf said that she had received no response to a letter sent to the governor.

tion, but not within the Kingston Elementary School walking zone and near the soccer fields. He said that the streets have no sidewalks, and that the city should preserve open space.

When asked why the people had no opposed the project previously, Bashford said he was not sure that the project was well-publicized and that the people were more interested in keeping commercial out.

Councilman John A. Baum said that it was unusual for council to acquire commercial property and make it recreational. "We've done a great favor to the neighborhood."

Jennifer C. Smith, of 1308 West Little Neck Road, said that her concern was for the safety of the community. People don't have much time to get out of way of the trucks, she said.

Josephine Zingraff, of 800 Oxford Drive, who purchased as a retirement home, said that the realtor did not tell her a fire station was planned for the site, and that no signs on the property indicated that the property would be used for a fire station. She said she feels her life savings have been put in jeopardy.

James Newton, representing King's Grant, presented a petition containing signatures of 1,000 residents in opposition.

In the past six years, he said, many things have occurred. He said that he learned that few people had been aware that a fire station would be located on the property. "Many in King's Grant are angry," he said.

Balko, responding charges of betrayal by residents, said that he did not betray the citizens. He said that in the future he wanted everyone of land the city owns to be have signage saying what the property will be used for. He explained that the city tries to get ahead of things by purchasing land before the facilities are constructed. He said that if the city put the property up for sale zoned B-1, someone would purchase it. He said that some of the present council members were on Council in 1983 when the property was purchased. They made a good deal, he said. He said that the city has other fire stations close to schools.

Chuck Coster, who lives in Middle Plantation, said that the residents might be willing to contribute to the purchase of another site.

for subdivisions by special exception, the open space promotion option would no longer be available, thereby eliminating a means of providing flexibility in residential development, and regulation of group homes and similar uses would be greatly restricted.

LTVB Presents Comedy

Send Me No Flowers, a comedy in the community theatre tradition, will be the next production at the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach, running Feb. 9 through 24.

Playwrights Norman Barasch and Carroll Moore opened this play on Broadway to reviews such as "a bouquet of laughs" and "a high average of curtain-to-curtain chuckles."

A brief play summary is as follows:

Wayne Price, a veteran of many comedies at the theatre, plays "George Kimball," a man whose hobby is hypochondria; who swears that a simple case of gas is a heart attack. The laughs begin when he overhears his doctor discussing the eminent demise of another patient and immediately assumes the physician means him. He bravely begins to prepare for departure. Including finding a suitable replacement for himself so this wife, played by T. Dawn Foy, won't spend her remaining years alone. All, of course leading to confusion and laughter.

Performances of Send Me No Flowers are scheduled for 8 p.m. on Feb. 16, 17, 23 and 24. A 3 p.m. matinee performance will be held on Feb. 18.

The Little Theatre of Virginia Beach is located at 24th and Barberton Drive. Tickets may be obtained by calling the theatre at 428-9233.

TDD Hotline Begins Training

Contact Tidewater, a 24-hour telephone hotline for crisis intervention and TDD service (Teletype Device for the Deaf) will begin a 50-hour fall training course on Feb. 27, through April 5.

There will be a morning class scheduled on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to noon at Galilee Episcopal Church, 40th and Pacific Avenue.

Lectures by area professionals will include: Depression and suicide, aging and dying, sexuality, marriage and family, alcohol and drug abuse, the military family, teletype services for the deaf, community resources and the principles of counseling.

Completion is necessary for anyone wishing to be considered for Contact volunteer service. Continuing Education Units will be available from both Tidewater Community College and the University of Virginia. A donation of $20/person or $35/couple is requested to cover the cost of materials.

Call Contact Tidewater at 428-2211, to register or for more information.

Car Break-Ins At Oceanfront

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers would like to help in solving several thefts from cars in three Virginia Beach sections. Anyone who can provide information that leads to an arrest will receive a cash reward of up to $1,000.

Between Nov. 14 and Dec. 7, 1989, 30 cars were broken into. Eleven were damaged, and thieves attempted to steal six of them. This occurred in the Lands End, Ocean Pebbles and Salt Marsh Point sections of Virginia Beach.

The items stolen include stereos, cassettes, speakers, jewelry, tools, cameras, money and guns. In most cases entry was gained by prying or breaking windows and doors.

Anyone with information about these or any other crimes committed in Virginia Beach, call Virginia Beach Crime Solvers at 427-0000. All calls are confidential and rewards are paid in cash.

Wilkins Speaks At VRA Meeting

Skip Wilkins will be the guest speaker at the general meeting of the Virginia Beach Chapter of the Virginia Restaurant Association on Monday, Feb. 19 at Aldo's Ristorante located at 1860 Laskin Road.

Social hour and dinner will begin at 7 p.m., followed by the business meeting and Wilkins' message at 8 p.m. Wilkins' message is about motivation and how we can do the most with what we have, about how each of us reach for and achieve our dreams.

Everyone associated with the food service industry is invited to attend. For additional information call Linda Gray at 499-5341.

Photographers Program Opens

"Memories of the Coast: A Photographer's Journey" will open at the Virginia Marine Science Museum on Friday, Feb. 16. This multi-projector slide show is by internationally known artist William McIntosh.

McIntosh is one of only two photographers in the region to hold the Fellow - American Society of Photography degree and has won more awards for his work than any other photographer in Virginia. Recently, he participated in a television interview for Educational Channel viewing in the United States and England.

Meet The Museum Staff

Virginia Marine Science Museum staff members who maintain the aquariums and other live exhibits will be available to meet the public on Wednesday, Feb. 28 at 7 p.m.

Find out what is involved in taking care of a large and varied collection of plants and animals.

Participants will also be given a tour behind the scenes in the Coastal River Room and in the Chesapeake Bay Aquarium work area.

The fee is $4 for members and $5 for nonmembers. For more information call 425-3476.

Museum Celebrates President's Day

President's Day, Monday, Feb. 19, will be celebrated at the Virginia Marine Science Museum with more programs and fish feedings. Start the day with a 9:45 a.m. program on freshwater fishes and turtles in the Coastal River Room. Following the program, there will be a feeding at the 6,000-gallon aquarium.

Both morning and afternoon visitors can learn about the fishes of the Chesapeake Bay with programs at 10:45 a.m. and 2:45 p.m. Afterwards, there will be a feeding at the tank, featuring over 48 species of fish.

Schools Receive Aviation Books

Virginia Beach public elementary school students with goals of becoming naval aviators now have two new resource books on which to base their dreams.

During a recently held brief ceremony at Kingston Elementary School, Audrey Kufahl, Kingston Elementary's library/media specialist and a member of the board of directors of the Association of Naval Aviation's Hampton Roads Squadron, presented 94 books on naval aviation (two for each of the division's elementary schools) to Virginia Beach City Public Schools Superintendent E. Carlton Bowyer.

Kufahl, who obtained the books donated by the association, made the presentation at the request of retired Navy Captain George Matt, president of the Hampton Roads Squadron.

The books, Navy Strike Planes and Navy Fighters, describe the present-day role of carrier aviation in the United States Navy and include many photographs of these planes in action.

The Association of Naval Aviation is a nationwide organization dedicated to the appreciation and support of naval aviation — past, present, and future. Headquartered in Washington, D.C., the association has nine regional "squadrons." The Hampton Roads Squadron has approximately 400 members.

Seatack's Reading Resource Teacher Leslie Quinlan Named City, State Reading Teacher

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

"I used to spend all my allowance on paperback books. I never had any money but I had lots of books," said Seatack Elementary School Reading Resources teacher, Leslie Quinlan.

Quinlan's passion for reading recently earned her the title of Virginia Beach 1990 Reading Teacher of the Year, as well as Reading Teacher of the Year for the state of Virginia.

Born in Illinois but raised in Charleston, W.Va., Quinlan said she began reading at an early age. After graduating from high school in 1959, the Fairfield Gardens resident attended Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, where she double majored in English and teaching.

Quinlan landed her first teaching job in Grand Blanc, Mich., as an advanced high school English teacher. During her second year of teaching she gave birth to her first

After the Quinlan family trans ferred to Virginia Beach, Quinlan began teaching seventh grade reading at Lynnhaven Junior High School. Three years later, in 1984, she transferred to Independence Junior to teach developmental reading and reading skills to grades seven through nine. In 1985, Quinlan obtained her current position at Seatack where she teaches grades one through six.

"I really like the adolescents. If I had to pick, that's my favorite," she said.

Quinlan was nominated to the Virginia Beach Reading Council Committee for the Teacher of the Year award. The committee screened all the applicants, one from each school, and narrowed it down to three people. The Virginia Beach school administrators then made the final decision. Quinlan's name was then sent to the state committee and was chosen out of 14 other applicants.

"It was thrilling," she said.

"I'm very satisfied there. It's got a great faculty and staff," said Quinlan.

Quinlan, who is divorced, is a member of the Virginia Beach Reading Council, is a lifetime member of the PTA and attends Kempsville Presbyterian Church.

"I do a lot of reading in my spare time and a lot of church work," she said.

Quinlan said she would like to get another degree, namely a doctorate in education, in the near future.

"My ultimate goal would be to teach prospective teachers in college," she said. "I grew up being taught to do your best at all times and I try to do that."

"I had teaching in my blood. I naturally fell into it. It seemed the natural thing to do," said Quinlan, whose parents both were teachers.

"I had teaching in my blood. I naturally fell into it. It seemed the natural thing to do," said Quinlan, whose parents were both teachers.

As the reading resource teacher, Quinlan is "in charge of managing the reading program in the school." She disperses material to teachers, performs in-service sessions with teachers, tests children who are new to the Virginia Beach school system and teaches reading classes. Mayor Presents T-Shirts To Cape Henry DARE Graduates

Cape Henry Collegiate School fifth graders learned that they are important enough to be honored by the mayor of Virginia Beach.

At a recently held 11 a.m. assembly, Mayor Meyera Oberndorf spoke out in praise of the children's active participation in DARE, Drug Abuse Resistance Education, a 16-week program of drug education led by a trained police officer.

The mayor spoke to the children, not just as the mayor, but as "a wife and mother" who cared about the temptations and problems of growing up in today's society. Her message stressed the role of police officers as friends to children, and someone they could go to for help.

After an introduction by fifth grade teachers Pamela Anton and Hilda Roe, Officer Bob Lawson, who instructed the children, presented special certificates of recognition and the DARE bears. To win a DARE bear, the student had to show particular interest and success in the course. Elizabeth Vermillion and Sarah Robbins were the delegated winners of the bears. The classroom winners of the "What DARE Means to Me" essay contest, Edward Carden and Matt Henry, each read their essays and received their certificates.

Following the presentations to individual students, all of the students were given a diploma for successful completion of the course and a "Just Say No" button by Lawson. Oberndorf gave each child a DARE bear T-shirt as a final reward for their involvement in DARE.

The program finale highlighted the efforts of Arlene Ingram for bringing DARE to Cape Henry Collegiate School. She was presented a DARE T-shirt for her support of substance abuse education. Other gifts were given by Student Council Association (SCA) officers. Nicholas Schiliske, president of the SCA, presented Officer Lawson with a dolphin wall plaque. Katie Fischer, secretary of the SCA, surprised the mayor with a bouquet of fresh flowers.

Oberndorf presents a DARE bear to fifth grade student Sarah Robbins.

City, Mayor Oberndorf Recognized

Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf has been appointed vice chairman for the National League of Cities' Energy, Environment and Natural Resources Steering Committee.

The committee is responsible for policy on air quality, water resources, wastewater treatment, energy waste management, infrastructure, urban esthetics, noise control, and disaster relief.

Established in 1924 for reform-minded state municipal leagues,

The National League of Cities represents 49 leagues and more than 1,400 cities directly.

Also, the City of Virginia Beach has been recently selected by The United States Conference of Mayors as a winner in the 1989 Prevention of Impaired Driving Awards Program. Eight cities were selected to receive awards, which were presented at the group's winter meeting in Washington, D.C.

VWC Presents Black History Month

During this week at Virginia Wesleyan College, several events in the college's observance of Black History Month will be presented.

An art exhibit featuring works by a black VWC student from Norfolk, junior Daryl Reid, an art major who is also a member of Virginia Wesleyan basketball team, will be on display through the end of February in the Hofmeister Library.

On Thursday, Feb. 15, at 11 a.m. in room 9 of the Fine Arts building, Dr. Martha H. Brown, associate professor of history at Old Dominion University, will speak on the topic, "Black Women in the Civil War." Her talk is based on her research of the subject and will show how the inclusion of the stories of black women brings a new dimension to the history of that period.

Also on Thursday, Feb. 15, at 7 p.m. in the college's Monumental Chapel, "Ebony Impact," a 60-voice gospel choir of ODU students, under the direction of Kevin Johnson, will present a program of traditional black gospel music.

All events are free and open to the public. Call 455-3200 to make reservations for the talk and concert, because of limited seating for both events.

years, beginning with the 1989-90 academic year. The committee's plan also called for paid teachers to man the hotline, which would concentrate on seventh, eighth, and ninth grade English during the initial year of operation.

Coincidentally, in the spring of 1989, Salem Junior High School's growth plan committee came to the conclusion that such a hotline was needed. As originally envisioned, volunteers would have manned Salem Juniors High School's hotline. While researching other hotlines, the Salem committee discovered that planning was already underway for a division-wide hotline. The two groups then got together.

13 teachers, and one assistant principal, are answering parent and student calls. Helping students with problems in English homework are Carla Celata, Nancy Moskway, Lorrie Fountain, Quinton Davis and Linda Deviney. Helping students with problems in math homework are Michelle Gasperoni, Lisa Freeman, Maria Cooper, Robert Bernhard, Donna Brown and Mary Alice Ramsey. Nancy Ward, the only teacher not employed at Salem (she teaches at Plaza Junior), is available to assist students with problems in either math or English.

Four other Salem staff members are assisting the effort by answering incoming calls: Kim Love, Lori Seagle, Pat Griffin and Susan Smith "see if the calls are within our guidelines and then direct them to the appropriate person."

The assistant principal at Salem Junior High School is Dr. Patricia Gavin.

Mayor Oberndorf reads to Cape Henry Collegiate School third graders.

Mayor Reads To Cape Henry Kids

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf recently visited Cape Henry Collegiate School to celebrate "January is Reading Month" and to kick-off Black History Month. Oberndorf was met with great enthusiasm by two third grade classes. The students greeted Oberndorf with pens in hand in hopes of receiving her autograph. The mayor signed autographs and read a black folktale to spell-bound children.

Mufaro's Beautiful Daughters, a

Caldecott Honor Book by John Steptoe, was the selection for her reading to the third graders. Steptoe's book was inspired by a folktale about an African king and his daughters, published in G.M. Thea's Kaffir Folktales in 1895.

The mayor's visit to Cape Henry Collegiate School was arranged by Carolyn Lincoln, coordinator of the Black History Month celebrations at the school.

Bank for the discontinuance, closure and abandonment of a portion of Cleveland Street beginning at the western boundary of Independence Boulevard and running in a westerly direction a distance of 225 feet. Said parcel is 50 feet in width. More detailed information is available in the Department of Planning, BAYSIDE BOROUGH.

CONDITIONAL USE PERMIT LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH:

6. An Ordinance upon Application of Bayfront Associates, Ltd., a Virginia corporation for a Conditional Use Permit for a home for the aged on certain property located on the north side of Shore Drive, 622.97 feet west of Beech Street. Said parcel contains 7.292 acres. More detailed information is available in the Department of Planning, LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH.

7. An Ordinance upon Application of Tom and Denise Duffy for a Conditional Use Permit for outside storage on the west side of Freight Lane, 230 feet more or less north of Southern Boulevard. Said parcel is located at 121 Freight Lane and contains 2.01 acres. More detailed information is available in the Department of Planning, BAYSIDE BOROUGH.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

VIRGINIA: IN THE CLERK'S OFFICE OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH, ON THE 19TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1990

In the matter of the adoption of a child by PAUL T. LITTLEFIELD and L. DIAHANN MEARS LITTLEFIELD, and for the change of name from HEAVEN LEIGH ROSE MAREE LITTLEFIELD to AMY LEIGH LITTLEFIELD

ORDER OF PUBLICATION
The object of this suit is for the Petitioners, Paul T. Littlefield and L. Diahann Mears Littlefield, to obtain the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose Maree Littlefield. Petitioners pray that a Final Order be entered in the above-styled adoption allowing the adoption and change of name; that the natural father of the said child is unknown, whose address is also unknown; and that the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose

Maree Littlefield be permitted without the consent of the natural father, whose consent appears to be unobtainable, contrary to the best interest of the child.

An Affidavit has been made and filed that the address of the natural father of Heaven Leigh Maree Littlefield, an infant born to Claire Maree Littlefield on August 5, 1987, in Oahu, Hawaii, is unknown, and it is ORDERED that he appear before this Court on March 2, 1990, in the Virginia Beach Circuit Court, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia, and do what is necessary to protect his interests.

It is further ORDERED that this Order of Publication be published in The Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper having a general circulation in this City, once a week for four (4) consecutive weeks.

Kempsville Meadows Elementary Enjoys Reading Month

By Carolyn Nesius
Special To The Sun

January was declared Reading Month by Virginia Beach Public Schools. Some exciting things happened at Kempsville Meadows Elementary School during the month.

Under the direction of the reading resource teacher, Merice Stevenson, numerous activities were planned and implemented to stimulate and motivate the students to become eager readers. Teachers, community volunteers, and storytellers from the storyteller's league captivated students with their fanciful tales.

Children puzzled over book trivia questions from children's classics and participated in "beary" lucky book ticket drawings.

There were bookmark and book jacket contests. Fifth and sixth graders designed and built floats depicting their favorite books. Students and staff dressed as storybook characters and paraded around the school. A "Storybook Fest" assembly was held in which several classes presented musical plays of classic tales. Everyone had a "beary" good time during reading month, and everyone is "beary" excited about reading!

Children presented the storybook float of Charlie and the Chocolate Factory.

Goldilocks and the Three Bears was presented at the assembly program.

P.A. AARP Holds Open Meeting

The Princess Anne Evening Chapter Kempsville Greens Golf and Country Club on Princess Anne Road of AARP will hold an open meeting on Feb. 26, at 7:30 p.m.

The public is invited to hear Gayle Zytron, home economist with the Virginia Extension Service and program manager of the Medicare/Medicaid Assistance Program. She will explain the details about the MMAP program.

The Medicare Assistance Program is co-sponsored by AARP and the Virginia Extension Service. It is designed to train volunteers to counsel and assist older adults in processing the forms, claims and appeals that are associated with the Medicare and Medicaid process. In addition to this evening program there will be a three day training program starting Tuesday, Feb. 27 to recruit volunteers. An adult member of the community interested in learning more about the MMAP program is encouraged to attend the Monday meeting. Volunteer counselors are needed, but they do not have to be senior citizens. However, they must agree to provide free assistance to the older adults for eight hours per month, for at least a six-month period.

For more information call 464-5062.

Costumes of all kinds could be found at the parade.

Flea Market At Rec Center

The Kempsville Recreation Center will hold an indoor flea market on Saturday, Feb. 24 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A $5 fee and valid facility card are required to rent a table; and, advance registration is required. Admission is free to the public.

For more information call 495-1892.

These children enjoyed the storybook parade with the clown.

As part of the storybook test, the Little Red Hen was performed.

Isabelle Cross, center, is surrounded by 20 of her grandchildren and 17 great grandchildren.

Cross Celebrates 85th Birthday

Isabelle M. Cross was honored recently at her 85th "surprise" birthday party.

The party was given by her children: Jim and JoAnn Cross, Floyd and Lucinda Cross and Barbara Petreth of Norfolk; Gale and Margaret Cross of Chesapeake; Agnes and Eddie Davis, Frank and Judy Cross and Bill and Theresa Cross of Virginia Beach, Janie and Kim Frenz of Royal Oak, Mich. were unable to attend the party.

The party was held at the Kempsville Recreation Center with 85 guests celebrating. In addition to her 10 children, Isabelle has 34 grandchildren, 40 great-grandchildren and one great-great grandchild. She also received birthday greetings from President and Mrs. George Bush.

Before you look at the back of the column to check your score, stop for a minute and ask yourself if you agree or disagree with tracking. Next try to think of an alternative to teaching children? It's not easy is it?

Ok, go ahead and look at the answers. Based upon the most recent research all are false. If you missed none, you will be placed in the top track. If you missed three or more, you will be placed in the remedial track. I can hear you now. "What do you mean that they are all false?" I mean that most of these false assumptions are so ingrained into the belief system of educators, parents, school boards and legislators that we challenge and argue against the answers and come up blank when we try to imagine a school, particularly a secondary school, that does not track children. We will continue this debate often in the next several years in Virginia Beach as we face up to the effects of tracking students. Join in the fray.

As suggested in the VEA article by Ruth Mitchell, Kati Haycock and M. Susana Navarro, one of the best ways to start rethinking tracking is to watch the movie Stand and Deliver, which portrayed the fantastic achievement of students at Garfield High School in Los Angeles. The movie helped convince me that we can and must expect high level achievement from all children not just those who are sorted into the top track.

field, Suffolk, Norfolk and Virginia Beach - will meet as usual for a patriotic program to remember "The Father of our Country." The annual George Washington Birthday luncheon will be held at the Holiday Inn on 39th Street and Atlantic, on Saturday, Feb. 17 at noon.

The 12 participating chapters and their regents, who serve as the Committee on Arrangements, are: Adam Thoroughgood, Mrs. R. Fenton Wicker, Jr.; Borough of Norfolk, Mrs. Richard B. Stine; Chesapeake, Mrs. Jack Gibson; Col. William Allen, Mrs. L. Seward Darden; Constantia, Mrs. Margaret H. Moore; Fort Nelson, Mrs. David B. Stuart; Francis Land, Mrs. Eugene Smith; Great Bridge, Mrs. Hulbert J. Kanter; Lynnhaven Parish, Mrs. William Scullion; Old Donation, Dr. Shirley B. Wilson; Princess Anne County, Mrs. H.T. Walsh; and Sarah Constant, Mrs. James W. Hall, who is this year's chairman and will preside.

This event will open with the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, the American's Creed, and the singing of the National Anthem. The President General's Message will be read, and there will be a special musical program with Miss Marilyn Abernathy as guest soloist, accompanied by Joan John at the piano.

Since it was my honor to be invited to speak on this occasion, I want to share a few thoughts about Washington. For years, I have been concerned that our youngsters will grow up believing his name was George Washington Sale! I fear even some adults know little about Washington beyond the exploded myth of the cherry tree!

Yet, it has been said that the biggest political story of the last 200 years was creating a country without a king. The tradition of monarchy, however, died hard in America. At the Constitutional Convention, Alexander Hamilton proposed that the president hold office for life, and no fewer than 60 ballots were needed before the method of selecting the president was decided.

Forrest McDonald wrote of Washington, "He was indispensable to the American experiment in self-government, and the success of his administration made possible the success of the government ... I suggest that the Americans of the Revolutionary generation, given their fear and distrust of executive authority, would not have been willing to make the presidency part of the Constitution at all had not Washington been available to fill the office."

fective problem-solving tool. In fact, the City of Virginia Beach benefits from many diverse boards, commissions and coalitions of citizens that offer advice, planning skills, time and energy to our community.

Through partnerships like Adopt-A-School, the Clean Community Commission, the United Way and Friends of the Library, to name a few, we can make the best possible use of the resources that we have available in our city. Each of us alone would never be able to make the positive impact that we can make by working together.

The celebration of customs and traditions is important to the continuity of a family or a community. Just as we celebrate traditions of the past like Valentine's Day, so we can learn from experiences in the past in order to work more efficiently in the present and plan more effectively for the future. Your future, my future and the future of all our citizens in Virginia Beach depends on our development of a strong partnership that can surmount any obstacles and meet any challenges that tomorrow may bring. Building our partnerships on the strengths of the past in Virginia Beach gives us a solid foundation on which to construct a bright future.

As you celebrate Valentine's Day with your partners - be they family, friends or associates - keep in mind the importance of forging strong bonds. Helping share the load also means sharing the joy of success.

This article was compiled through the courtesy and assistance of Katherine Martin, Media Specialist III, Public Information Office.

Although Washington was reluctant to take on this new responsibility, he expressed optimism about the new nation in words which we can appreciate today. "We are surrounded by the blessings of nature ... In short, it seems as if we should want little besides common sense and common honesty to make us a great and happy people."

George Washington left America quite a legacy. His greatness lay in his unselfish patriotism and his unassailable character. It was his modest approach to the presidency which defined the role of the chief executive for years to come. As President Calvin Coolidge said, "His was directing spirit without which there would have been no Independence, no Union, no Constitution, and no Republic ... In wisdom of action, in purity of character, he stands alone."

Mysterious Newsletter

Talk Is Cheap

Most of the school board members are tight-lipped about an unsigned newsletter that was and is still being circulated in the Virginia Beach community. Because the newsletter was anonymous in origin, some people refuse to acknowledge its existence.

The newsletter sets forth somewhat serious allegations concerning Superintendent of Schools E. Carlton Bowyer and former superintendent, James E. Melvin.

Obviously someone, or a group of people, have a personal quibble with Bowyer and others mentioned by name in the newsletter. However, the author or authors should come out of their shell and admit to writing and printing the newsletter.

If the author took the time and expense to put together the newsletter and mail it to citizens throughout the city, his or her name should appear on it.

The public will not take interest in the allegations if the accuser isn't made public.

One source told The Virginia Beach Sun that the school administration complex is like an "armed camp" because of the newsletter.

If the author or authors of the newsletter are as "concerned about the future of Virginia Beach" as the newsletter states they are, they should sign their names to the newsletter.

Why are the author or authors remaining anonymous? Do the author or authors work for the city? Are they closely involved with the daily routine of the school administration? Is it one person or a group? If the author or authors are truly concerned about the future of the school system and the education their children are receiving, they need to let others know who they are so that these serious allegations can be addressed in a formal proceeding if necessary. — L.P.

Golden Olympics

Beach Involved

The Annual Virginia Recreation and Park Society's Golden Olympics, an event which brings together people 55 and older for competition and camaraderie from May 17 to 20, exemplifies goals young people should have for themselves.

The community's younger members should aim to remain physically active, and keep their interests alive after retirement. They need to engage in fellowship with their peers and to choose to belong to groups and organizations.

Kempville resident Cokey Daman is a positive role model for younger people. At 71, he exercises every day and competes in strenuous races throughout the year. He feels good, he's healthy and he enjoys his life.

He is an example of what retirement and old age can be like. It can be healthy and enjoyable and it can be filled with friends and fun activities.

The sad alternative is to do what millions of Americans do. They choose to sit alone in their homes all day, venturing out of their homes only to bring in the morning paper and to buy groceries. They fill their hours with mindless television programs and lead stagnate lives.

They will feel old and will, in effect, become old. The physical inactivity will serve to make their bodies unhealthy, which will affect their mental well being accordingly.

Belonging to a peer group reinforces healthy feelings and encourages physical activity. There are too many fun things to do, like the Golden Olympics and volunteer groups, for a retiree to pass up.

Young people shouldn't pass up the chance to make active plans and goals for their retirements. They can benefit their health by staying active and by belonging to groups and organizations that reinforce positive activity. They will enjoy their retirement more and likely live longer and healthier lives. J.A.B.

The Virginia Beach Sun

Locality Layout

The Virginia Beach Sun recently underwent a little change. In case some readers haven't noticed, we've changed the format of our layout. Now, instead of categorizing our news by subject, we do it by sections of the city.

Our readers are very important to us and we want to make their job of reading the paper as easy as possible. Depending on the news we receive, there should be a section for just about every major neighborhood. Whether it is Kempville, the Oceanfront, Bayside or Great Neck, each section will have its own place in the paper.

How much news we run on each location, though, depends somewhat on our readers. Send us your neighborhood news and pictures. We'd be more than happy to print any garden club, civic league, church, recreation, or business news, for example, but we don't know it's available unless you send it to us.

Hopefully our new format will make it easier for our readers to find the news in which they are most interested. Instead of scanning the whole paper, just look for the appropriate page heading. And remember, we love pictures. You don't have to be a professional photographer to submit a picture to The Sun. Just be sure it is clear and concise and that each person in the picture is identified.

We'd like to hear from our readers if you have any complaints about the new format. Or if you have found it more helpful, let us know. Each section of Virginia Beach is an important part of the city and deserves just as much recognition as the next. — K.L.D.

Kempville Greens Made Safer

The Kempville Greens Golf Course is getting a face-lift, primarily to safeguard its neighboring residents. Because several homes were built fairly close to the golf course, a few adjustments need to be made.

City Receives Patriotic Award

This was the second year the City of Virginia Beach received the award. During the 1989 bond campaign, 152 new savers and 10 increased allotments were recruited.

Board Member's Proposal Published

The proposal Military Liaison Missions Between NATO and the Warsaw Pact, co-authored by school board member John A. Fahey and Dr. Phillip S. Gillette, director of the graduate program in International Studies at Old Dominion University, has been published by The Johns Hopkins Foreign Policy Institute in a new book (hard and soft cover editions) entitled, The Future of U.S.-Soviet Relations: Twenty American Initiatives for a New Agenda.

The Fahey/Gillette proposal was selected in a nationwide search by the Foreign Policy Institute of the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies for innovative ideas concerning increased cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union in order to assess the changing nature of U.S.-Soviet relations and to devise an agenda for the future.

Earlier, a summary of the proposal, one of four under "Defense and Arms Control," was sent to the White House in the Johns Hopkins Foreign Policy Institute's A Report to the Forty-First President of the United States.

Beach Students On Belmont List

Three Virginia Beach residents were named to the fall semester Dean's List at Belmont College in Nashville, Tenn.: Mishia Crute, daughter of Robert and Holly Crute, is a freshman majoring in music education. Angela Shaw, daughter of Herb and Ruth Shaw, is a freshman working toward a degree in

Don't Change The National Anthem

Editor:

I have recently received a copy of the Quilt article on the "Star Spangled Banner," The Virginia Beach Sun (Jan. 17). I struck a sensitive chord: reamining our National Anthem.

There are many fine patriotic songs, many good for marching, but only one anthem. Yes, it is three-quarter time, but so is "America" (God Save Our Noble Queen). It can be marched to, but that is unimportant.

Let those sing who can, others listen and think the words. The Anthem has historic values, brilliant rendition styles, and is inspiring in poetry and musical setting.

FLE Opt-Out Deadline Nears

Parents wishing to opt their child out of some or all of the parts of the Virginia Beach City Public Schools Family Life Education lessons should let their child's school know by Friday, Feb. 23. Family Life Education lessons begin the week of April 3 through 6.

Alternative instructional activities will be provided for the students who do not participate in a Family Life Education lesson. Since Family Life will be taught during health, these activities will include topics such as nutrition, substance abuse, consumer health, and personal health and fitness. The work location and supervision of these students will be determined by the building administrators. These activities will be evaluated by the child's teacher and will be treated as any other classroom assignment.

Copies of the Family Life Education lessons are available for review in each Virginia Beach public school, the School Administration Building, and all Virginia Beach public libraries until Feb. 23.

Family Life Education videotaped materials are available for review, by appointment only, at the school division's Office of Media and Technology, 5120 Cleveland Street, suite 100 until Feb. 23. To make an appointment, call 473-5124.

A parent or guardian who prefers not to have his or her child participate in some or all parents of Family Life Education lessons should sign and return the opt-out form to child's school. No student will be excluded from instruction without a signed statement from the parent or guardian.

An opt-out acknowledgement letter will be sent to parents or guardians by the school principal during the week of Feb. 26 to March 2.

If at any time a parent or guardian would like to reinstate his or her child into the Family Life Education lesson, notify the principal in writing.

Schools, TCC Share Credit

Virginia Beach City Public School's Superintendent Carlton Bowyer and Tidewater Community College District Office Dean of Instruction and Student Services Robert Grimes recently signed the school division's first Dual Credit Enrollment Agreement.

The dual-credit plan allows high school juniors and seniors at least 16 years of age to take courses at TCC and earn both high school and college credit. To take advantage of the program, a student must gain their principal's approval and be admitted to the college.

Students may choose from nearly 50 courses, including Creative Writing, Calculus, Economics, Political Science, Physics, Meteorology and several foreign languages. Some courses have prerequisites which are listed in a course schedule that will be available in all high schools. Students may register for the courses at their schools. Classes will be conducted on the college campus and at various high schools.

The college course semester grades will be used in computing the student's high school grade average. Six semester hours will be equivalent to one high school unit. Three semester hours will be equal to one-half unit. The student must request that Tidewater Community College send an official transcript to the high school principal.

The dual-credit plan goes into effect in September, 1990. The dual enrollment agreement will offer students a wider range of course options, eliminate duplications of programs, facilities, and equipment, and encourage students to pursue post-secondary education.

Bush Recognizes Methane Plant

President George Bush recognized Virginia Beach's methane-to-energy conversion program briefly as he addressed the United States Conference of Mayors in a meeting held recently in the nation's capitol. Virginia Beach Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf was in attendance.

In speaking of the responsibility of cities toward their environment, Bush mentioned the creative landfill project, that opened nearly a year ago, at Mount Trashmore II. The new 9-megawatt plant, which derives its energy entirely from otherwise wasted landfill gases generates enough power to save 150,000 barrels of oil annually, thereby providing electricity for 10,000 households.

The methane conversion project was developed through the Department of Public Works, Waste Management Division, and was implemented through cooperative efforts by the city, the local power company, and private industry. The city will receive the benefit of $10,000 a month for the next 20 years and the plant is operated by private industry, at no cost to the public.

Since its opening, the methane-to-energy plant has been written up in government and scientific journals across the nation. Virginia Beach has received inquiries about the sound environmental process from as far away as Australia.

Two weeks prior to the president's address before mayors from across the nation, the city's methane promotion had been accepted on an international level by the United States Information Agency - USA, which will be taking materials explaining the project on a traveling exhibit — ENVIRONMENTAL - USA, in 1991. The exhibit will tour Poland, Hungary, and other eastern European countries.

Adopt-A-Highway Keeping Our Roads Litter Free

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
Meyera Oberndorf

As our resources and fiscal responsibilities are stretched further and further, city departments are looking for innovative ways to stretch the tax dollars. One way the Landscape Services Division approached this concept was through the recent introduction of the City of Virginia Beach's Adopt-A-Highway Program. The Adopt-A-Highway Program was designed to lessen the financial burden placed on the taxpayers to keep our roadways litter free and also to serve as an educational tool against littering.

Through the Adopt-A-Highway Program, local civic and business organizations are encouraged to adopt two-mile sections of highway to help keep them litter free. So far, 29 individuals, organizations, civic groups and businesses have sent in agreements to adopt nearly 65 miles of Virginia Beach's roads in the Adopt-A-Highway Program.

Many diverse groups have joined the effort against roadway litter. Besides the civic organizations and businesses such as Rudee's Restaurant, Sentara Health System, the Jaycees, Rurians, and Kiwanis clubs, we have received agreements from a family, the Tidewater Striders, Phi Theta Kappa National Honor Society at Tidewater Community College, the Tidewater Bicycle Association, the Involved Truckers, the Cape Henry Woman's Club, the Courthouse Community United Methodist Church and the firefighters at

Through the Adopt-a-Highway Program, local civic and business organizations are encouraged to adopt two-mile sections of highway to help keep them litter free.

Virginia Beach Fire Station #19, to name a few.

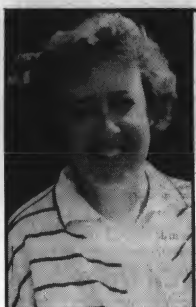

I would like to commend each of the 15 groups participating in our Adopt-A-Highway Pilot Program for making it a huge success. During the first four months of the program, 225 volunteers have participated in 38 cleanups collecting over 20 tons of litter and other debris from our roadways. These volunteers donated over 571 hours of their time helping us keep Virginia Beach beautiful.

Black History Month Has Been Truly Monumental

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

This week's Sun article is written by Cheryl Tokac, VBEA vice-president.

This year's Black History Month has been truly a monumental one, not only on a national perspective but on an international one as well.

It seems to many of us that never before this "peace time" activity resulted in so much freedom being granted to so many people. The releasing of Nelson Mandela from his 27 years of imprisonment in South Africa can only serve to further impress upon us the importance of guaranteeing the individual liberties of individuals for future generations. Once again, as I had last year, I found myself pondering the changes of the last years and how we, as adults, are preparing our children to become responsible citizens in our world.

Freedom it seems has been an elusive commodity for many people in the world. We have been witness to the tearing down of the Berlin Wall and saw, for the first time, families that had long been apart becoming one again. The adjustment to freedom is often a difficult one. We all remember those scenes of families walking into West Germany and experiencing the sights and sounds of freedom. I remember one man amazed at all the choices he had when attempting to buy salami. He wondered why he needed several choices when he could only eat one? Beyond that, elections have been held in Soviet Bloc nations for the first time in many years. The ability to vote and express an opinion, taken for granted by many Americans, is a cherished right to many.

I remember with some concern a report about a project which several American college students completed about promoting social responsibility. One of the suggestions made to encourage individuals to vote was to "pay" them to do so. In a time period when people would literally die for the right to vote, it is regrettable that we in this country would feel the need to be paid for such privilege.

Black History Month symbolizes freedom as well as accomplishment. It is perhaps very appropriate that this month would see the release of Mandela

How To Fend Off Those Offensive Phone Callers

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

Who hasn't experienced the maddening frustration of evening, morning and anytime intrusions by telephone solicitors? Personally, I find these calls most offensive when they come during the dinner hour, which is when they most often occur.

The techniques run the gamut of human experience. They challenge the sneaky entrance of short-fused TV commercials in ingenuity. There is the announcement that you have won a prize, or the statement that the truck will be in your neighborhood that week. There are the gutter cleaners, the chimney sweeps, the tree cutters, the home repairers and the photo opportunists.

Some of the more subtle are the calls asking for one of us by our first name. This is a dead give-away if this "unidentified person" asks for my husband by his given name. Then, I am immediately on guard as friends use his nickname. But our dinner conversation has already been interrupted and we have become annoyed.

Sometimes, I think there ought to be a law against such personal invasion. In the meantime, AT & T, a.k.a. "Ma Bell," has come to the rescue with a new device whereby the caller can be identified before the receiver is picked up. This service became available on the first of the month for a majority of numbers in our area.

On that same day, I met for lunch with some friends from the ROWS

While these so-called "Smart Phones" are one possible solution to the problem, smart friends have developed their own techniques.

(Retired Officers Wives Society). Their experiences and reactions were varied concerning the new Caller ID Phone System. Although they basically favored this guardian of privacy, they pointed out several drawbacks.

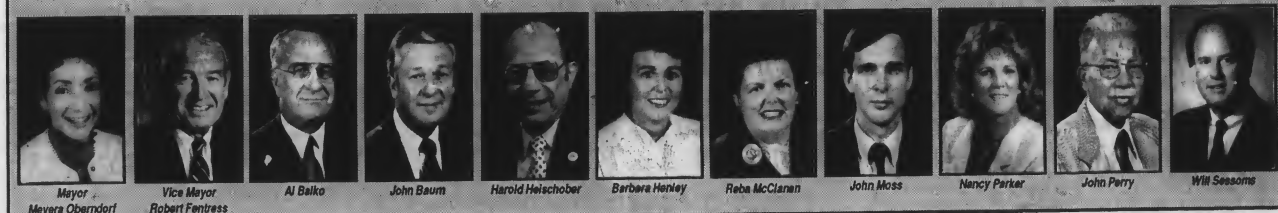

Betty Steere commented that the expense of installation and monthly charge for the protection gave her pause. Dee Clark added that she did not feel like memorizing all of her friends' telephone numbers. I suggested we could begin making a "hit list" of telephone numbers, whose owners we wish to discourage!

Betty Pajuf, who agreed that these unwanted calls are a nuisance, commented, "I hope this new device will help discourage fishing expeditions by commercial interests. After all, established charities have other means to promote their causes." Lucille Salkowski said she felt uneasy when someone telephoned and said he was calling for the police.

While I am certain the courts will measure this new equipment by legal

Chesapeake Beach Civic League Fights Rezoning Issue

The Chesapeake Beach Civic League, which has been relatively dormant for several years, woke up to fight a recent rezoning granted by city council which would have permitted higher density apartments on a 3,800 square-foot site at 2260 Pleasure House Road.

Council, reconsidering its previous action at the request of Bayside Borough Councilman John L. Perry, denied by a vote of 10-1 the application of Pleasure House Properties for a rezoning from A-12 Apartment District to A-18 Apartment District. The planning commission had recommended unanimously for approval of the application.

Councilman John A. Baum, who dissented, said that in general he considered it a mistake to reconsider previous actions.

Bob Sutherland, one of the applicants complained that residents had not expressed opposition at any of the previous hearings. He said that the applicant would remove an eyesore, an old house on the site.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley observed that the site at present was non-conforming since it contained two more units than the 12 permitted by the zoning.

Robert Smith, president of the civic league, said that the league had not taken an active part in city affairs for the past four or five years, but recent growth in the area forced the league out of "retirement."

He said that incorrect traffic data had been submitted previously, that the sewer system was operating at capacity, and that the rezoning would set precedent for higher density in the area.

sign than the one flat against the building, to pay for the road improvements, to reduce enrollment by 34 percent of what she had previously requested, to make the height of the building no higher than 24 feet, to meet with the neighbors on the building design. She said her morning session will be from 9 a.m. to noon, her afternoon session from noon to 2 to 3:15 p.m., and the evening session from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The school will have a maximum of 175 students in the morning program, 180 in the evening program and 47 in the afternoon program.

The school now operates only in the morning. Councilwoman Barbara Henley said that the city set a precedent when it located a public school (Providence Elementary School) in the residential neighborhood.

Councilman John L. Perry said that it was the first time since he has been on council that he received 103 letters on a single item.

Moss said that it has been logistically impossible to respond to all the letters, that he was on 45 at the time.

He said that of the 3,000 votes he has cast in almost four years this was one of the toughest. He said that approval represents the greater public good.

Sites

set by a policy. She said that she had been told that if a locality had sites under the set amounts, they would have to give variances.

She said she did not want to tell the public the city was purchasing the property because of a state mandate when that isn't the case.

Councilwoman Reba McClarnan said that she has never been sure how the schools determined the required acreage. She suggested that sometimes poor drainage and park and recreation areas have something to do with it.

Balko said that not as much land would be required with multi-story buildings but that other problems would arise, such as the need for elevators for the handicapped. "We need guidelines on what the state says and what it does not say," said McClarnan.

"We will get to the bottom of this," said Balko.

"We may not be as limited as we think," said Henley. "We may be limited by other things but not by mandate."

Center For Arts' Annual Road Rallye Set For April

The Fourth Annual Road Rallye For the Arts, has been scheduled for April 1.

The rallye is an annual fundraising event organized by the staff and volunteers of the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts and funded by area businesses. During the Rallye, which can be compared to "a scavenger hunt on wheels," various historical and artistic points of interest will be visited as participants attempt to find answers to Rallye questions with the aid of clues and often puzzling directions.

The course, which takes from two to four hours to complete, was mapped out by members of the Tidewater Sports Car Club. It begins at La Promenade shopping center on Laskin Road and winds through city streets and country roads with a pit stop at Checkered Flag Lynnhaven. The final destination is the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts where an awards ceremony and finishing party will take place. The awards party is open to non-rallyists for a $10 fee. This includes entertainment, food, and beverages.

The Rallye, which drew over 130 vehicles and 450 participants in 1989, is open to everyone who drives a vehicle. Participants arrive in everything from sports cars and classics to family station wagons. Awards are presented to winners in several categories including: Most Spirited, Most Exotic Automobile, Best Costumes, and Oldest Automobile. Special prizes will be awarded to Audi drivers. US Air is offering the grand prize of a trip for two to Orlando, Fla. which will be awarded to the team with the most correct answers. A "booby prize" will be awarded to the team with the fewest correct answers.

Registration begins March 1 at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts. Advance registration fees of $35 enter one car, one driver and one navigator. The fee for each additional passenger is $15 per person. Participants may also register the day of the event for $40 per car, driver and navigator and $20 per additional passenger.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts. The center, which moved to its new facility in April 1989, is a private non-profit organization that provides year-round exhibits, adult and youth educational programs, music and dance performances and lecture series to the Hampton Roads area.

The race is sponsored by Checkered Flag Motor Car Company and Audi.

Richmond Choreographer Performs Modern Dance At Center For Arts

In an energizing combination of performance and informal lecture, dancer and choreographer, Kaye Weinstein shatters the pretensions and evokes the mystique of modern dance.

Weinstein, from Richmond, will present Dance: Time, Space, Dynamics at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts on Sunday, March 4 at 2 p.m.

She will perform selected solos from her contemporary repertoire and additionally discuss the following: dance as a performing art, how movement becomes dance, the craft of choreography, and the similarities between modern dance, ballet and jazz.

Weinstein has been performing, teaching and choreographing in Virginia since 1979. Described as vibrant, agile and distinguished, she has performed in Louisiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Maine and New York City. She has choreographed over 30 dances, some involving elaborate collaboration among herself, musicians, sculptors and painters.

Her works have been featured in many productions of the department of dance and choreography at Virginia Commonwealth University, in the Richmond Dance Invitational, and the Dogwood Dell Festival of the Arts. From 1986 to 1988, she was visiting artist for the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond. Most recently, she received a grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts to serve as artist-in-residence for Southside Virginia Community College from January to May 1990.

Weinstein presently teaches at the School of the Richmond Ballet and the West End Academy of Dance in Richmond, where she is initiating modern dance curriculums. Additionally, she has taught at VCU, Iowa State University, University of Kansas, and Long wood College in Virginia.

Dance: Time, Space, Dynamics is part of The Living Arts, a performing arts series showcasing four programs of music, dance and theater at the Center of the Arts. The Living Arts is the first performing arts series organized by the Center and features outstanding, national performers scheduled from February to June 1990. Portions of this series are made possible with generous grants from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

Kaye Weinstein's performance is in the Center's Price Auditorium. Admission is $3 for VBCA members, $5 for nonmembers, payable at the door. Children six and under are free. Reservations are not necessary, but may be made with advance payment. For ticket information or a series brochure, telephone the Center for the Arts at 425-0000.

Surf Saturdays Series Continues

The Life-Saving Museum of Virginia continues its annual Surf Saturday Series for young people with "Tall Ships" at the museum, 24th and Atlantic, on Saturday, Feb. 24 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Participants will make a very simple wooden sailing ship. After a snack, Bill Henry from the Marine's Museum in Newport will tell tales of the sea.

Space is limited and preregistration is required. The event is for children in grades three and four. The cost is $2 for members and $4 for nonmembers. Call 422-1587 for reservations.

Jewelry Making Workshop At Beach Center For The Arts

Artist J. Fred Woell travels from Maine to present a workshop on making jewelry by casting with metals on Monday, March 19 at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts.

The workshop will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the center's studios. The deadline to register is March 12. As one of 27 affiliates of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond, the center hosts several visiting artist workshops, free and open to the public throughout the year.

To prepare them for casting rings of their own design, students will learn the many aspects of lost-wax metal casting. Woell will offer advice on how to recognize and use various casting waxes and even how to build home kilns and casting facilities. In addition, Woell will use visual examples and printed handouts to illustrate his points.

Woell was a professor of art metals at Swain School of Design in New Bedford, Massachusetts, from 1985 to 1987 and is currently affiliated with the Haystack Mountain School of Crafts in Deer Isle, Maine. His works in metal have appeared in more than 100 exhibitions in the United States and Europe, including Craft Today: Poetry of the Physical, organized by the American Craft Museum in New York in 1986, and on view at the Virginia Museum in 1988. He was also the subject of a cover story in MetalSmith magazine in 1987.

Woell studied at the University of Illinois and the University of Wisconsin, where he received an MFA in art metals and graphics. He also holds an MFA in sculpture from the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

The jewelry workshop is organized and funded by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. High school students and adults may register at the Center for the Arts (with a nonrefundable $5 registration fee) through Monday, March 12. Participants supply some materials.

Youth Art Month Begins March 1 At Center For Arts

In recognition of Youth Art month, the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts presents In Pursuit of Excellence: Works by Artistically Gifted Students in the Student Gallery, March 1 through April 8.

A reception will be held at the center on Sunday, March 11, from 2 to 4 p.m. The exhibition and the reception are free and open to the public.

Art works in the show are submitted by elementary and secondary school children attending the Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented. The Old Donation Center, an accelerated learning program for academically and artistically gifted young people, is affiliated with the Virginia Beach City Public Schools.

In Pursuit of Excellence includes two- and three-dimensional work in all media. The show was organized by Old Donation art instructors Bob Karl, Nancy Prichard and Bob Weaver.

The Center for the Arts Student Gallery is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m.

The Center is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, across from the Pavilion Convention Center.

Shriners Hold Annual Tartan Ball

The Khedive Shrine Highlander Bagpipe and Drum Marching Unit will hold its sixth annual Tartan Ball on Saturday, March 31 from 6:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the 39th Street Holiday Inn.

Highlighting the ball will be the Scottish vocal group, "The Highlanders," from Lancaster, Pa. Additional entertainment will include a dance band, and a mass band presentation by the bagpipers and drummer from the various clans in attendance.

Tickets for the ball should be purchased prior to March 26. They are $30 per person and will include hor d'oeuvres, a sit down dinner of prime rib of beef, and an evening of fun and entertainment. To purchase tickets, contact Chris or Audrey Fritschmann at 460-1585.

All monies donated by sponsorships will be donated to the Shrine Cripple Children's Hospital, where all care and treatment are provided free to a child. Last year's sponsorships from businesses, unit member, public donations and a portion of ticket sales enabled the Highlanders to donate $2,750 to the crippled children.

More information may be obtained by calling Chris or Audrey Fritschmann at 460-1885 or Wes Gibson, Tartan Ball chairman, at 486-4219.

Police Seek Computer Thieves

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers would like the community's help in identifying a picture of a man who used an assumed name to steal a camcorder and a moving van. Anyone who helps police identify this man will receive a cash reward.

On Sunday, June 18, 1989, a man who used the name "Gregory Hughes" rented a Panasonic camcorder from Erol's Video-in, the Hilltop West Shopping Center and never returned the camcorder.

This same man, on Sunday, Oct. 1, 1989, rented a white, 1989, 14-foot, Ford moving van from Budget Rent-A-Car in the 3300 block of Virginia Beach Boulevard. The truck was never returned and is still missing.

A police investigation determined that "Gregory Hughes" is not the man's real name. This photograph taken by Erol's Video security camera is of the man police are looking for. He is described as white, in his late 20s or early 30s, with brown hair parted in the middle and combed back, and a slight mustache.

Anyone who recognizes this man should call Virginia Beach Crime Solvers at 427-0000. All calls are confidential. Callers will not have to give their names or testify in court to collect a reward of up to $1,000.

Police Seek Computer Thieves

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers would like the community's help in identifying a man and woman who stole a computer from a business in the city's Arcadia section. Anyone who can provide information that leads to an arrest will receive a cash reward.

On Wednesday, Jan. 24, at 12:10 p.m., a man and woman walked into the Radio Shack electronics store in the Kemps River Crossing Shopping Center. The couple was video taped by a security camera while they looked at several computers and talked to the manager. When the manager was helping another customer the couple hid a Tandy, Lap Top computer in a coat and left the store.

The woman is described as white, in her twenties, about 5'2" tall, thin build and blonde hair. The man is also white in his late twenties or early thirties, about 6'1" tall, medium-build with a protruding stomach, brown hair, wore glasses and a baseball cap.

This same couple has been seen in other stores and may be responsible for other thefts. Anyone who recognizes these people can call Crime Solvers anonymously at 427-0000. All rewards of up to $1,000 are paid in cash.

NAS Oceana Sailor Of The Quarter James Weaver Believes In Communication

By Annette Hall
Special To The Sun

The current Naval Air Station (NAS) Oceana Sailor of the Quarter is a very capable individual. He has to be — Aviation Ordnanceman Second Class (AO2) James A. Weaver, Jr. is an ordnanceman assigned to the station's Weapons Department.

Weaver is a bomb crew assistant supervisor and crew leader. "I supervise the action that goes on when we break out, assemble or ship weapons," says the 24-year-old Waterloo, N.Y., native.

He oversees all actions during the assembly of a weapon which has a variety of components. "I make sure all regulations are adhered to and make sure no conditions develop that could lead to an injury," explains Weaver who supervises seven people.

Weapons for shipment to an aircraft carrier have to be properly packaged. "I also have to make sure all components required are shipped," notes Weaver.

In the Navy over six years, Weaver plans a career. "My father was in the military. Every male in my family, that I can remember on either side, has been in the military."

After joining in 1983, Weaver went to recruit training in Orlando, Fla. and then Ordnance "A" School in Memphis, Tenn. He has been at NAS Oceana since 1984, first with Fighter Squadron Seventy-four (VF-74) and then with the air station in the Weapons Department.

To enhance his advancement goals, Weaver is pursuing qualifications as an enlisted air warfare specialist. He began his independent study of the various rates in the Navy, especially those in the aviation community, in October 1989.

A selection board of ten chief petty officers interviewed candidates and asked prospects a variety of military and current events questions. Results of the board are not made known immediately. Weaver was very surprised and pleased when NAS Oceana Commanding Officer Captain Michael N. Matton visited the department and personally notified Weaver of his selection.

Weaver enjoys basketball, weight lifting and bowling. He is a department team member competing for captain's cup points in the station's bowling league.

One of Weaver's responses to board questions gave some insight on the candidate: "People on the base need to listen to each other more — they need to help each other to communicate."

As Sailor of the Quarter, Weaver receives a $50 Savings Bond, a

Norrington Speaks On Houseplants To Aragona Garden Club Members

By Virginia Gayle
Special To The Sun

Do you have a yen to grow houseplants that are lush, green and gorgeous? Follow the lead of Chuck Norrington, master gardener, and an indoor green thumb is practically guaranteed.

"In Grandma's day," said Norrington, recently speaking at Aragona Garden Club, "houseplants thrived. Grandma had no central heat or air conditioning."

Today, temperatures can be kept within acceptable ranges by keeping plants away from drafts, and air conditioning or heat ducts.

Acceptable humidity is assisted by grouping plants up a half-inch of aquarium gravel or broken stone in shallow trays. Water poured in the gravel beneath the plants humidifies by evaporation. Plants in or near showers, sinks or tubs benefit from such placement. Additional humidity for plants not so well placed is achieved by misting from any spray bottle.

Most house plants, said Norrington, thrive with four hours of good, bright light a day. Not direct sunlight, however, which can burn.

Supplemental lighting can keep a steady flow of rejuvenated plants to living areas. A spare room equipped with a four-foot fluorescent shop light, two 40-watt cool blue fluorescent lights and one 25-watt incandescent bulb to provide light a foot above leaf surface meets all lighting requirements, and is excellent for African violets.

Norrington does not recommend fertilizing plants newly acquired from a commercial source. Frequently they have been "pushed" with fertilizer to make them market-ready, and don't require fertilization for a few months.

Otherwise," he said, "observe nature. Houseplants don't lose their leaves in the fall, but growth slows. Don't feed them." This usually occurs in October or November. "When the plant breaks dormancy," he added, "that's when it's hungry."

"I operate on the theory that a little fertilizer is good. Less is better. In making the solution, I use one half the fertilizer or double the water called for. Starting in March, I feed every other watering cycle," he said.

Norrington recommends water drawn the day before use. The chlorine will have evaporated and the water will be room temperature. To test for water need, he uses Grandma's cake testing technique. Instead of a broomstick, he inserts a pencil into the soil. If soil sticks to the pencil, delay watering. When it comes out "clean" and dry, it's time to water again.

Norrington waters plants in a sink or tub, allows them to drain and waters again. He recommends the complete flushing out of fertilizer every six months for most pots; once a year for large containers. This is done by multiple waterings which rid containers of accumulated salt deposits.

For "troubled" plants, Norrington recommends washing them particularly the undersides. A teaspoon of wood ashes spread on the growing medium and watered in is used to eliminate fungus gnats, while alcoh-hol on a cotton swab is sudden death to mealy bugs. Ants are no problem when a sticky substance such as Vaseline is spread on the base of the plant to "trap" them.

An effective home recipe for houseplant spray can be made by mixing in a one-quarter measure; one cup alcohol, one tablespoon dormant (Volk) oil, one tablespoon vinegar (or one tablespoon Safer Insecticidal Soap), and one teaspoon dishwashing liquid (or shampoo). Fill the container with water to the one-quarter measure.

Norrington's soil? One part peat, one part perlite, one part builder's sand.

And voilà! Your thumb is greening even as you read.

Police Seek Driver Robbery

Virginia Beach police are investigating the robbery of a pizza delivery driver. Crime Solvers is offering a reward for information that will lead to an arrest.

On Friday, Dec. 15, 1989, at 2 p.m., a pizza delivery driver was returning to his car after making a delivery on Shasta Court in the Plaza section. As he was getting into his car, two men pinned him against the car with the door, threw him to the ground and took a small amount of money from his pocket before running away. Both men were black and in their late teens or early 20s. One man is described as 5' 10" tall, 160 pounds and has short black hair and brown eyes.

Anyone who recognizes this man or has information about any robbery can call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers will not have to give their names to collect a cash reward of up to $1,000.

Back Bay Wildlife Refuge Welcomes New Employees

The filling of two position vacancies has been announced by Anthony Leger, Manager of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge.

Joe McCauley has been named primary assistant manager, succeeding Jack Hagan, who transferred to the service's Minidoka Refuge in Idaho. Paul Taylor was recruited to fill a vacant outdoor recreation planner position.

McCauley returns to his home state following nearly four years as manager of the service's Supawna Meadows Refuge near Pennsville, N.J. As that refuge's first full-time manager, McCauley was fully involved in a number of programs which will relate directly to his responsibilities at Back Bay. During his tenure there, he established plans for the management of marsh and water, grasslands, prescribed burning; pest plant control; and resident deer, as well as a general station management plan. McCauley has a bachelor's degree in wildlife management from West Virginia University, and is accompanied by his wife Julia Herick and two sons, Jacob and Jesse.

Taylor served most recently as chief ranger with the Corps of Engineers in central California. Originally from the New England area, Taylor spent six years as a teacher in the public schools of Massachusetts before moving to California to attend graduate school. While there, he earned a master's degree in park administration from California State University. Taylor's wife Janet, with a master's degree in art, hopes to carve out a niche in the thriving local art community.

Following an extended period without a full complement of personnel, the staff at Back Bay will be embarking on several new projects during 1990 to enhance wildlife habitat and to provide increased opportunities for visitors. A major impoundment rehabilitation effort will get underway this spring, and will result in increased capabilities for controlling water levels and generating wetland food plants. These efforts will increase the Refuge's ability to effectively manage species such as the greater snow goose, tundra swan and various ducks. Additionally, improvements will be made to interpretive displays and facilities for the handicapped.

Prescribed Burning Conducted At National Wildlife Refuge

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologists have renewed marsh management efforts by burning stands of vegetation at the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge.

In recent days, approximately 800 acres have been burned, with up to an additional 800 acres scheduled for completion by the end of March.

The Back Bay Refuge was established for the management and enhancement of migratory waterfowl. Most notably, the Greater Snow Goose requires sufficient new growth of grasses and forbs to support its great local concentrations.

Burning of matted layers of dead or "rank" vegetation accomplishes three things: It removes choked undergrowth, stimulates new growth by releasing nutrients to the soil, and exposes root stocks to foraging geese. Extensive studies have clearly demonstrated that properly managed burns significantly improve regeneration in areas with excessive buildup of rank vegetation.

Birdwatching Walk At Refuge

Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge Manager Tony Leger will conduct a waterfowl walk on Sunday, Feb. 25 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Refuge.

During the walk Leger is also expected to discuss topical issues facing the refuge, the local community, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the national conservation movement.

Participants will meet at the refuge visitor contact station, lo-

All burning is being conducted by personnel specially trained for that purpose, and in strict compliance with procedures outlined in the refuge's Marsh and Water, and Fire Management Plans. Conditions under which burning is permitted, such as wind speed and direction, air temperature, and relative humidity, constitute a "prescription" for burning.

That prescription has been developed under strict guidelines, and coordinated locally with the state Department of Forestry and Air Pollution Control Board, local fire districts, and the Navy's Oceana Naval Air Station.

The majority of the burning will be restricted to islands in Back Bay. Of 11 existing refuge burn units, three are contained by bay islands. Other burns will occur under tight controls on the barrier spit portion of the refuge, inside of carefully maintained fire lines.

For additional information regarding this or other programs at Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, call the Refuge at 721-2412.

The outing is free, although a refuge entrance fee is required. Reservations can be arranged by calling the Refuge at 721-2412 Monday through Friday, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

VWC Breaks Ground For Campus Dining Center

Architect's rendering of the Robert F. Boyd and Sara M. Boyd Campus Dining Center.

Judge Jerry G. Bray, chairman of Virginia Wesleyan College's Board of Trustees, addresses guests at the recent ground-breaking ceremony for the college's new Robert F. and Sara M. Boyd Campus Dining Center.

Virginia Wesleyan College broke ground recently for the third of three major buildings in four years, and most prolific building period in the college's history, college officials report.

The $3.5 million Campus Dining Center follows a $1 million academic building — the Center for the Humanities — completed in 1988, and the $3.8 million completion of Academic Village II, now under construction, to be opened this summer.

The ground-breaking ceremony honored a charter member of the board of trustees, Robert Friend Boyd, and his wife Sara Miller Boyd of Virginia Beach, who provided the initial leadership gift of $500,000 for the dining center.

The 24,500-square foot campus dining center, with 17,000 square feet of new construction and renovation of 7,500 square feet of existing space, will include a dining hall with seating for 500; two smaller dining rooms; a gallery/lounge; kitchen, preparation and serving areas; a bookstore; campus post office and an enlarged business office. The facilities are scheduled for completion by mid-1991.

and Constitutional standards, my personal reaction is that a person's home is his/her castle! Intrusion is by definition an uninvited entry. There is no excuse for an open sesame to hucksters and unwelcome callers, whether by phone or in persons. I always look to see who is knocking before I lower the drawbridge!

At night, we activate our considerable security system to fend off robbers. Should we not in the daytime be able to protect ourselves against robbers of our time? I just don't want "unknowns" to reach out and touch me.

While these so-called "Smart Phones" are one possible solution to the problem, smart friends have developed their own techniques. Polly Gillock told of a neighbor who simply refuses to answer his telephone after 5 p.m. to avoid solicitors.

Then, an old friend in Williamsburg told how her neighbor has worked out his first line of defense by utilizing his answering machine. With a whimsical touch, he responds to friend or foe with the following statement: "Dear caller, you have reached #_____ (telephone number). I am not interested in buying any more stocks or bonds. Nor do I wish to invest in real estate. That is a young man's game, and I am now an old man. Our house has been reeroofed. We have new windows and aluminum siding. Scandals, on the part of past and present administrations, have terminated my political activity. Whether I go for a Democrat or a Republic is my business. I still believe in a secret ballot. If you are a friend, leave your number and I will get back to you. Good friends are hard to find."

and herald a new era in South African politics. The changes during the last few months have been great. It is the prime time for us to educate our children about the benefits of freedom and the responsibilities that it carries. As Americans, we carry the unique distinction of being a diverse assembly of people of various backgrounds and ethnic origins. For this reason, we have much to learn from each other about cultures rich in history and accomplishment.

Just as others have gone before, it is the Black Americans who must now take their rightful place in a world that appears to be ready to enjoy and learn from that richness. The lessons we have learned so far from each group that has had to face the challenges of acceptance is that struggle may be long but the benefits many. The natural result is pride - a sense of pride and a willingness to continue the struggle through education to learn from the past and build for the future. It is the responsibility of our children to continue along the path of social responsibility.

- ✓ Where litter has already accumulated.
 - ✓ Where they know someone else will pick up after them.
- We believe our Adopt-a-Highway Program will address all these reasons by:
- ✓ Reminding all citizens that roadides are public land owned by all of us.
 - ✓ Removing accumulations of trash that attract litter.
 - ✓ Reminding citizens that littering does not provide jobs for city crews, but instead forces volunteers to clean up after their friends and neighbors.

Editorial

Although no one has ever been injured, the risk of a golf ball flying into someone's yard or window always exists. For children playing in their backyards near the course, it could be a little dangerous.

The improvements at the golf course should not only maintain its safety, but also attract more golfers. With all the additions and expansions that are to be made, Kempville Greens should be a much nicer place to golf. And the nicer the course is, the more people will be attracted to the Kempville area.

Virginia Beach has a wide variety of recreational activities, both for its residents and tourists. It's very important to keep the city's facilities appealing to attract more people to the area. - K.L.D.

"It's awe inspiring to see someone, in their 80s computing in the 5K run," — Fran Hurt.

Organization Games which are held every two years. The Golden Olympics is Virginia's only qualifying site for the nationals. Seniors must qualify in the olympics before representing the state nationally. Syracuse, N.Y. will host the 1991 nationals.

"All four (races) broke records," he said.

He completed the 1,500 meter race walk in eight minutes, 32 seconds; the 5K race walk in 29 minutes, 42 seconds; the 5K run in 20 minutes, 17 seconds; and the 10K run in 43 minutes, 48 seconds.

Daman competed in 25 races last year and plans to compete in Golden Olympics events this year. He was unable to go last year because he was competing in another race event at that time.

"I'm not 100 percent sure, but I hope I can," he said.

Virginia Beach has participated in the Annual Virginia Recreation and Park Society's Golden Olympics for ten years, said Gloria Alley, supervisor for senior citizens, Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation.

Between 550 to 600 seniors have participated through them over the last decade.

Some seniors go on their own and don't notify the Virginia Beach Recreation department, she said. Therefore, they cannot note exactly how many seniors from the area attend.

Some of the events are: track and field, swimming, race walking, archery, golf, mini-golf, canasta, bridge and checkers.

The only requirements are the participants must be 55 or older and that "they come with a good attitude," said Hurt. The participants have a complete physical and sign a waiver form before participating in any events.

First aid is provided on the site, she added.

The event is also somewhat of a vacation, said Alley. It typically "costs a little better $100" for everything. The buses from Virginia Beach go up a day ahead of schedule so that preparations can be done in a relaxed manner. The $100 covers four nights lodging, plus all meals and transportation.

The first Golden Olympics had 250 participants, said Alley, but Virginia Beach didn't participate. After hearing about the event, Alley got the seniors in her area involved.

It's one of the "best programs to come along for the older adults," she said.

They can participate regardless of skill level and they don't have to be a participant to go, Alley added. Often, friends and family come just to watch the games.

Hurt stressed that the events were to promote fun and togetherness among the participants. Many of them have been competing regularly every year, she said.

The olympics builds "closer relationships, friendships and a beautiful camaraderie," said Hurt. "We offer the philosophy that you don't stop playing because you grow old, you grow old because you stop playing."

The olympics also benefits the area that hosts it, said Hurt.

"It's a boost to the economy for the area," because the 600 to 800 participants plus their friends and family buy souvenirs, gasoline, food and lodging. The area receives press coverage and word-of-mouth advertising because the participants will go home and tell their friends about it, Hurt said.

"They have pride in having hosted the event," she added.

The olympics uses between 300 to 400 volunteers, Hurt said. They are recognized professionals in business and the Jaycees. Younger groups like the boy scouts also help, she said.

The volunteers run the events, handle the luggage, set up evening socials, handle check ins and check outs. In short, they handle all aspects of the olympics, she said.

A lot of volunteers come from the companies that sponsor the olympics, said Hurt. The sponsors are Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Virginia, Signet Bank and Virginia Power.

"We've had tremendous support from these people," said Hurt.

Virginia is the only state that uses volunteers to handle the olympics, she said.

"They use hired coordinators in other states," said Hurt.

The participants will stay in different locations in Danville. Some will stay in dorms and others will stay in nearby motels.

A lot of the events will be on the college campus, but others will be spread throughout the community, said Hurt. For example, the golf events will take place at the local golf course.

The food service at Averette College will prepare the meals and adjust them according to the needs of the older people by making sure that they are lower in salt and cholesterol, she said.

"Averette is good about adjusting the menu," she added.

To further promote health and comfort, they are adding a new warm up and cool down period to the schedule as well as more training. These things are "good habits" to practice, she said.

met with civic league members, homeowners and golf course staff last spring and finally submitted a recommendation, which has since been forwarded to City Manager Aubrey Watts.

"We're trying to make the best for a situation of joint use. That was the intent of the recommendations," said Walston.

Councilman John Moss, Kempville borough representative, said, although he doesn't play golf, it was his understanding that the golf course was "intolerable." He agreed on making the improvements to make the course "more competitive and playable."

According to Haigler, there have been several other improvements made to the golf course since the city began operating it in 1987. Fencing was installed, new sand was placed on the traps and seeding was put down on the fairways.

"The golf course is in much better condition because of the improvements we've made and we have a good maintenance and professional staff over there," he said.

The golf course, formerly named Kempville Meadows Golf Course, was purchased by R.G. Moore in 1987. He then made an agreement with the city to operate the course. The golf course currently features water on the back nine holes, sand traps, a pro shop, a concession stand/snack bar that serves breakfast and lunch, a driving range, putting green and pull and gas carts.

The city discontinued membership fees when it took over the course; players now must purchase a facility use card from the Kempville Recreation Center. Green fees for residents of Virginia Beach are $8 for 18 holes and $5 for nine holes. Winter rates for the public are $10 and summer rates are $11.

Haigler said the golf course participation has increased from 39,000 per year in 1987 to 55,000 last year. Of the city's three golf courses, Kempville Greens is the smallest in size but the second most frequently used. Redwing Golf Course, located on General Booth Boulevard, attracts 70,000 golfers per year. The Bow Creek Golf Course visitor count lies somewhere in between the two.

"People come there, they're treated well and they want to come back," Haigler said of the Kempville Greens course.

The money to make the Kempville Greens improvements comes from a self-supporting Golf Course Enterprise Fund, which is a retained earnings fund. The fund, which is not a part of the city's general fund, contains the money that is left over from each golf course once all operating costs are paid. Haigler said it costs $465,000 a year to operate Kempville Greens. He is responsible for preparing the budgets for all three golf courses and overseeing the contracts for the golf carts, pro shops and snack bars.

Walston said the next step to making the improvements is hiring a consultant to do the actual design. Then the job is bid out for the actual construction, which Walston said may begin in as early as six months.

"It would be nice to begin some work this fall," she said.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan, who represents the Princess Anne borough, was the only dissenting council member. She could not be reached for comment.

Another large district project is to widen and improve Route 13 (Carolina Avenue) in Suffolk. The project runs from just south of the N.F. & D. Railroad tracks to just south of the intersection with Fayette Street. The contract, which involves relocating some utilities, was awarded to D.J.W. Construction Co. Inc. of Chesapeake for $1,384,263.

Sections of guardrail in Portsmouth, Norfolk, Chesapeake and Virginia Beach will be replaced by Penn Line Service Inc. of Scottsdale, Penn. More than 25,000 feet of guardrail will be installed at a cost of $253,225.

The existing shoulders on east- and westbound Route 58 in Chesapeake will be restored by APAC Virginia Inc. of Richmond at a cost of $168,471. The project extends from the Snowden Street intersection to the bridge over west Military Highway.

Work on these projects could begin within 45 days, and VDOT urges motorists to drive cautiously through these, or any, work zones.

Another 1-664 contract, valued at $13.3 million, was awarded to Morrison-Knudsen Co. Inc. of Boise, Idaho. The work associated with this contract involves more than nine miles of traffic management and control systems as well as the electrical work in the tunnel and ventilation buildings. (The new tunnel, located between Newport News and Suffolk is slated to open at the end of 1991.)

Police Seek Haygood Burglars

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is offering a cash reward for information that will lead to an arrest in a rash of burglaries at storage units in the Haygood Area. Twenty-five units were broken into over a four month period between August and December, 1989.

Thieves in many cases cut the locks off, removed the property and replaced the lock. Over $47,000 in stolen items including stereo and video equipment, televisions, furniture, microwave, silver and clothing were removed.

Anyone with information about these thefts, the location of any of the stolen property or any other crimes should call Virginia Beach Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Rewards are paid in cash and calls to Crime Solvers are not recorded or traced.

Chamber Of Commerce Announces King Neptune Early In Year; Dr. John J. Krueger Anxious To Get Going

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Between his job and his extra curricular activities, Dr. John J. Krueger is a busy man.

But the Linlith resident is not too busy to serve as King Neptune for this year's Neptune Festival, set for Sept. 15 through 30.

Krueger's new title was publicly announced last week at a press conference at the Virginia Beach office of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce. The 58-year-old pathologist said he gladly accepts the new role.

"I felt very proud, pleased, honored. I was rather surprised," he said.

Krueger was chosen by a secret selection committee, according to Neptune Festival president, Bill Center. The committee judged Krueger on his community involvement.

"I like activity. I'm an active person. My wife says that's my strong point, my energy level," said Krueger, a Linlith resident.

Aside from his busy schedule supervising the pathology laboratory at Virginia Beach General, Krueger is also an active member of the community.

He is a member and past president of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club; founder of the Virginia Beach Foundation; on the board at the Virginia Marine Science Museum; member and past president of the Virginia Beach General staff; member and past president of the

City Acquires Right-Of-Way For Ferrell Parkway; Wildlife Refuge May Never See Expansion

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The city will start acquiring the right-of-way for the portion of Ferrell Parkway that is included in the property the Fish and Wildlife Service plans for the expansion of the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge.

By a vote of 6-4 (Councilman John Perry was absent) city council Monday evening adopted an ordinance authorizing the acquisition of the right-of-way for Ferrell Parkway from El Camino Real Drive to Sandbridge Road and from Sandbridge Road to Sandbridge Beach.

The city was laying claim to the land before the Fish and Wildlife Service acquired it for the refuge.

This time, council took action on the recommendation of the United States Department of the Interior and Fish and Wildlife Service to acquire the needed right-of-way before the Service purchases the lands over which the Ferrell Parkway would pass.

The resolution states that in the Service's Land Protection Plan, Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, dated Feb. 1990, nearly all needed rights-of-way to construct Ferrell Parkway, including the city's existing easement, are listed as priority 1 for acquisition by the Service.

Anthony G. Leger, refuge manager, said that he was not aware that the Ferrell Parkway right-of-way was considered category 1. He said that the category refers to areas threatened by development. He said that the property is not considered category 1 because of the Ferrell Parkway.

Although Ferrell Parkway has been in the city's road plan since 1971, that portion of the road is not funded in the current Capital Improvement Plan.

Voting against the ordinance were Mayor Meyers Oberdorf, Councilwomen Barbara Henley and Nancy Parker and Councilman John Moss. The four had supported a substitute motion to defer consideration of the ordinance until March when more information would be available.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan, who had introduced the ordinance, said that with the service itself suggesting the acquisition, she saw no reason to delay the action.

Chuck Bowles, of 2715 Bluebell Drive in Sandbridge, and a member of the Back Bay Citizens Alliance, is opposed to the 10-mile acquisition of property to extend the refuge. He said that the Sandbridge community would become isolated from the rest of the city, that its only connection now is Sandbridge Road.

He said that the Cambridge Development Company, which owns ten acres of land which may be involved in the purchase and which he represents, asked the service for a time frame for the purchases, but was ignored. Leger said that the City Alliance requested that all land negotiations by the service be done in public. He said that this could not be done.

Michael and Kristen Rorer had told a similar story. Speaking before council under the sponsorship of Councilwoman Reba McClanahan, the Rorers said that Mrs. Rorer's 1976 Oldsmobile Cutlass was towed away from the property at 2420 Virginia Beach Boulevard at the request of Pat Martin, manager

What's The Buzz? Ask A Beekeeper

They come in all — races, German, Italian, African and Caucasian, but they're not people.

They're bees, and at least 44 people in Virginia Beach, 29 in Chesapeake and six in Portsmouth, all take them seriously.

These bee lovers are all members of the Tidewater Beekeepers Association, a 92-member organization that meets monthly in Chesapeake to get the latest buzz on bees.

Doris Baker, of Indian River Road in Virginia Beach, has been a beekeeper for 10 years. She said each beekeeper has their own reasons for keeping bees. Some sell the honey, some use the beeswax and some just enjoy beekeeping as a hobby.

"We depend so greatly on honeybees for pollination of our fruits and vegetables. Pollination is their main reason for being here," she said.

Diane Miller, of Blackwater Road in Virginia Beach, agreed. "I use the bees for pollination.

I take the honey off for my own use," said Miller, who owns Blackwater Plantation vineyards.

Miller said she uses the honey, which she takes out of the honeycomb, to make biscuits and waffles. Baker has even taught classes on how to cook with honey.

Wellford Buchanan, of Carolyn Drive in Chesapeake, said he "enjoys watching them and getting the honey out every once in a while."

Buchanan, who had four bee hives earlier this year until he lost them to a cold winter, has been a beekeeper since 1971.

Aside from the extremely cold winter, Baker said there is another reason why some beekeepers have recently lost their hives. A

SPSA Recommends $6 Tipping Fee Increase; Portion Of Money To Expand Recycling Program

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The Southeastern Public Service Authority (SPSA) is recommending a $6 increase effective July 1 in the tipping fee it charges member localities to pay for the increasing cost of solid waste disposal. Of this amount $1.27 is attributed to the cost of expanding the SPSA's curbside recycling program.

In Virginia Beach that additional $1.27 fee translates into $162,074 for fiscal 1991. Anticipated for fiscal 1992 is a $3.78 increase or $82,392 in additional costs, and in fiscal 1993, a $5.68 increase for an additional $724,865 in additional costs.

Contributing to the higher cost of disposal, Durwood Curling SPSA executive director, told city council at a work session Monday were:

New State Department of waste management regulations for landfills. Where it cost SPSA $40,000 an acre to build the Suffolk landfill, planned expansion by 60 acres will cost $170,000 an acre under the new regulations.

A mandate by the State that all local governments have to recycle 25 percent of their solid waste by 1995 in 10, 15 and 25 percent increments. Recycling, while desirable environmentally, is more costly.

A State mandate that each government or consortium of governments, such as SPSA, submit a recycling plan. This will cost about $150,000.

Curling said that the General Assembly forgot to do one thing to give local governments financial aid so that the cost will fall back on the localities.

In addition, he said, during the current session, 50 pieces of legislation dealing with solid waste are before the General Assembly, including such things as the disposal of batteries and disposal of yard wastes.

Some council members, however, questioned SPSA's concentra-

Curling said the district has five drop-off centers of which one is unsupervised. The problem with the unsupervised centers is contaminants. People, for instance, will mix window glass in the glass container, which is not accepted by the recycling plants.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said that it was not enough to consider only one drop off center which did not work. Europe has them all over, she said. They have them in shopping centers and public areas. She said that in Virginia Beach she thought the population would cooperate. "I am disappointed at how quickly this program is dropped."

Curling said that SPSA selected the curbside method and yard waste disposal as the methods to pursue. Curling said that the district already has a number of recycling activities. It recycles tires at the Suffolk plant where it also removes automobile batteries. It sells stove and hot water heaters to junk dealers, has an oil drop off at the Oceana transfer station and also recycles paint which it sells to a dealer.

Car Owners Are Victims Of The City's Towing Ordinances

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The poor and other owners of old-model cars are becoming the victims of the city's towing ordinances, city council will told Monday evening.

E. George Minns, a consultant and head of the NAACP in Virginia Beach, said that he knew of three cars that had been "stolen."

He said that the cars were picked up under the authority of the city's ordinances for some infringement, then sold for scrap before the owners could raise the money to reclaim the vehicles.

Michael and Kristen Rorer had told a similar story. Speaking before council under the sponsorship of Councilwoman Reba McClanahan, the Rorers said that Mrs. Rorer's 1976 Oldsmobile Cutlass was towed away from the property at 2420 Virginia Beach Boulevard at the request of Pat Martin, manager

The Real Estate Assessor's Office is mailing notices today to Virginia Beach property owners informing them, in a majority of cases, that the value of their property has increased which means a hike in their real estate taxes.

Assessment projects show an average increase of 2.61 for 1991 compared to a 4.2 percent increase in 1990. In 1983 and 1982 the increases were over ten percent. In the past five years, however, the assessments have been increasing at slower rates.

Of the city's 128,151 parcels reassessed, 36 percent showed no increase or decrease (three percent).

The remainder all showed increases ranging from 2 percent to more than 13 percent. Approximately two percent of the parcels had an increase of greater than 13 percent.

City Assessor J.D. Banagan presented the new figures on which 1991 real estate taxes will be used to council Monday evening.

His figures show that the city's real estate is getting older, that property values in the Princess Anne Borough increased the most (8.5 percent) that Virginia Beach Borough values are virtually stable with only a .1 percent increase, and that growth is slowing down.

Banagan projects a 1991 assessment of $16,009 billion which will generate $165,216,000 in revenue at the approved 1991 real estate tax rate of $1,032 per $100 of assessed value. Each penny of the tax rate equates to $1,601 million in revenue. That's approximately a five percent increase in revenue with considering an increase in the tax rate.

The typical increase individual properties is 2.6 percent, Banagan said, but don't be surprised if yours is higher. The range throughout the city is from zero to five percent.

Including growth along with appreciation, the total value of the city's real estate increased 5.8 percent to $15,744,321,001. Total assessments were greatest in the Lynnhaven Borough, ($5,029,305,016) where assessments increased 6.6 percent.

Labor Day Committee Formed

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council Monday evening appointed a 35-member Labor Day Community Coordination Committee which includes 29 members of the Interlocal Business and Civic Coalition of Virginia Beach and six additional members.

Named co-chairmen of the group were Dr. Harrison Wilson, president of Norfolk State University, and Andrew Fine, business and civic leader. Wilson and Fine were among the six members added to the Interlocal Coalition nucleus. Fine and Wilson also served on the Labor Day Review Commission appointed by council.

Others include William Harrison Jr., an attorney; the Rev. W.R. Cox; Michael Barrett, with the Runnymede Corporation; Captain Michael Matton, USN, and Herb Taylor, president of the Council of Civic Organizations.

The appointments were discussed at an earlier executive session. The names were presented to council by Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress for consideration toward the close of the formal council session which lasted until about 10:30 p.m.

The committee was appointed by a vote of 9-1 with Councilwoman Reba McClanahan dissenting. McClanahan last week had submitted a resolution which would have left the planning and coordination of activities to outside groups or agencies with the city taking a co-operative role in matters of health, safety and welfare with such groups that want to promote Labor Day 1990 activities.

Council, however, voted 9-2 in favor of Mayor Meyers Oberdorf's resolution which established a Labor Day Community Coordination Committee for the centralized planning, coordination and staging of Labor Day 1990 events. McClanahan and Councilman John Perry, council's only black member, dissented. Perry was absent Monday because of illness.

McClanahan's resolution had expressed concern for the city's liability if the committee is sponsored by the city. Her resolution noted that the planning and implementation of special events for Labor Day 1990 is not a normal nor mandated activity of government and that planning and coordination through the efforts of private groups and private sponsorship with the city cooperation is in the best interest of the citizens and visitors.

Council's action is an effort toward averting the problems encountered during the 1989 Labor Day weekend when an estimated 100,000 black college students who were members of Greek-letter fraternities and others attracted by the celebration converged on Virginia Beach. The weekend ended in riots and looting charges that the city was remiss in not preparing for the event.

In all, four reports were submitted to the council, reviewing the

Five Vie For Bayside Borough Seat

VBS Staff Report

Margery "Marge" Schechner, a real estate appraiser, has announced her candidacy for the Bayside Borough seat in the upcoming May 1 councilmanic election.

Schechner, 44, lives in Saw Pen Point in Wickliffe and is making her first bid for public office.

If elected, she said she'll try to help expand the city's tourism, business and industrial base.

She said she is prepared to spend some campaign money and will try to raise "as much as I can."

Schechner is expected to have competition from former Navy captain Leo Waldrup; retired accountant, Stanley Hargell; Councilman John Perry and former Virginia Beach mayor Louis R. Jones.

King Neptune

Dr. John Krueger Named King Neptune XVII

Most people are afraid of bees. Usually a bee sting results in red welts and swollen skin that can be very painful. For the less fortunate, a bee sting can mean admittance to the hospital; those who have allergic reactions must take precautions.

But, despite all the negative publicity bees receive, there are still some people who love them! Beekeepers are not afraid of bees at all. They bravely put their hands in the hives and even hold the bees without flinching. Most of us run away as soon as that infamous buzzing noise is heard.

Remarkably, the bees will leave you alone, as long as you don't harass them. They'll fly around you and even land on your clothes, but they won't sting unless they become agitated. So if you ever unexpectedly come across a bee and it decides to rest on your arm, don't swat at it! It will eventually get bored and fly away.

Most beekeepers don't keep bees just for the fun of it, although some may. The bees are used for several reasons. The honey they produce is used and can be eaten right from the hive. The bees also produce wax which one woman uses to make Christmas tree ornaments. It goes to show what creativity can do!

Beekeeping may be a great hobby for some, but those people who are petrified of insects should find another pastime. - K.L.D.

Beekeepers Choose Hobby For Number Of Reasons

Although Neptune Festival isn't until next September, this year's King Neptune has already been announced. Each year a man who is actively involved in the community is chosen to represent the festival.

This year the secret festival committee made another good choice. Dr. John J. Krueger, a Virginia Beach pathologist, will reign over the festival's royal court and serve as symbolic host of the 16-day celebration.

Krueger's community involvement is something to brag about, therefore making him a perfect candidate for the role. He is a member of many organizations ranging from those in the medical field, to the Rotary Club to the Marine Science Museum. Although Krueger wasn't born and raised in Virginia Beach, through his 25 years of residency he has built a dedication to the city.

It's important that King Neptune be loyal to Virginia Beach. Such an honor should only be given to someone who would be proud to represent the city. Since the Neptune Festival attracts thousands of people each year, Krueger will be a familiar face during the festivities. Congratulations to Krueger for being chosen King Neptune XVII. - K.L.D.

VWC License Plates Available

The Department of Motor Vehicles is offering Virginia Wesleyan College supporters a new way to display their school allegiance and spirit. The Virginia Wesleyan "CollegePlate" license plates bearing the school logo is now available.

The Virginia Wesleyan plate features the school logo in tan on the left side of the plate and "Virginia Wesleyan College" printed along the bottom of the plate in tan and blue. The standard plates are numbered VW1001 through VW9999.

Citizens may pick up Virginia Wesleyan CollegePlates at the DMV Norfolk/Military Circle Branch Office, located at 5745 Poplar Hall Drive, or order the plate at their local DMV branch office. The fee for the plates is $25 per year in addition to regular registration fees. Citizens may select a personalized CollegePlate for an additional $10 per year. The fee for plates ordered in the middle of the vehicle registration cycle will be prorated. Because of design constraints, the plates are available only for passenger cars and light-weight vans and trucks.

CollegePlates are a result of legislation passed during the 1988 session of the Virginia General Assembly allowing DMV to provide the plates for any institution of higher learning which requests them. Currently, 20 CollegePlates are available, and about 15 colleges and universities are working with DMV to design their plate.

Citizens who are interested in ordering CollegePlates other than the Virginia Wesleyan plate should contact their local DMV branch office to be sure their college's plate is available.

Elementary School Students Celebrate American History Month By Writing Essays

American History Month has been celebrated each February since 1956 by the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution.

Students in grades five, six, seven and eight in Virginia Beach public and private schools are encouraged to participate in an essay contest which promotes this observance. For his essay on "An American Inventor, 1775-1850," Brad Orcutt, a sixth grader at Thoroughgood Elementary, has been chosen a District One winner.

About 200 fourth graders from Trantwood and Windsor Woods wrote essays on "What The Flag Of The United States Means To Me."

Essays by Devin Patrick Allen, Tiffanie Marie Wichman and Brandon Shaw Turner were chosen by the Adam Thoroughgood chapter to be submitted to the State contest for competition in the "Flag of United States" essay contest.

The contests at Tranwood, Windsor Woods and Thoroughgood were sponsored by the Adam Thoroughgood Chapter of the DAR, one of 20 chapters comprising District One - the entire Hampton Roads area.

A display showing essays from all three schools can be seen on the second floor of the Virginia Beach Central Library.

Clarifying Cable Television

By Senator John Warner
Special To The Sun

It's time to pull the plug on climbing rates being paid by Virginia Beach consumers for basic cable TV service.

Mail and telephone complaints received by my offices tell me that many of Virginia's 1.1 million cable subscribers are displeased, too, by other practices of the cable monopolies in their communities.

Many Virginians find they have little or no say in what programming they receive, what local broadcasting stations are carried, or where those stations are placed on the dial.

And not only individual consumers are frustrated. Local government authorities, broadcasters, and small cable system operators also have approached Congress and the Federal Communications Commission with their complaints.

Most of us would agree that cable television has improved our lives. It provides clear signals in both urban centers, where electronic interference or structural obstacles may block reception, and rural areas too remote to pick up regular broadcasting.

Cable originated in the 1940s for this purpose, and it has been a resounding commercial and technological success. In 1950, 70 systems served 14,000 subscribers. Today, more than 50 million homes nationwide receive cable service.

In most localities, sports, entertainment and new programming is more diverse, thanks to cable. In Virginia today, 63 percent of TV households have cable service, and there are approximately 352 different cable operators.

But as the industry has grown, so too have complaints about service, programming and escalating prices.

In an effort to address this problem, I have joined my Republican colleague from Missouri, Sen. Jack Danforth, and a bipartisan group of other senators in sponsoring the "Cable Television Consumer Protection Act of 1989" (S.1880).

To understand where cable consumers stand today, we have to look back to 1984 and the Cable Communications Policy Act, which largely deregulated the cable TV industry.

The 1984 act prohibited local or state governments from regulating cable service in areas where a cable operator was deemed to have "effective competition."

"Effective competition" was defined as any area where three broadcast (i.e., over-the-air) stations existed. So, if a locality in Virginia has three broadcast signals, the cable operator is deemed to have "effective competition" and his rates may not be regulated.

Even though few localities in Virginia (or the nation) have two cable operators competing head-to-head, deregulation has occurred for about 97 percent of U.S. cable operators.

Rates have risen sharply in many of these same areas.

The U.S. General Accounting Office has found that 28 percent of cable consumers saw their basic rates rise by at least 40 percent within two years after rate deregulation.

Deregulation was intended to create competition between cable providers. But with local franchising, obviously, the opposite has occurred, leaving us with government-sanctioned monopolies.

Local governments from throughout Virginia have shared their frustrations with me about their inability, realistically, to regulate local cable franchises. Fortunately, abuses in Virginia have been uncommon.

But where abuse does exist, localities must be given effective tools to deal with the problem.

S. 1880 helps accomplish this goal, in part, by redefining "effective competition" to mean that at least two multi-channel video providers exist in a locality.

Where such competition exists, the market would determine price. Where head-on competition does not exist, local or state government would be allowed to regulate rates.

S.1880 also would require that cable systems carry local television station signals. Local stations are obligated by federal law to serve their respective communities, and many citizens need cable service to receive those local TV signals.

The bill does not address the cost of elective services such as premium channels or pay-per-view programming.

S.1880 is now under consideration in the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee. I look forward to seeing it advance as the 101st Congress progresses.

Public School's Homework Hotline: A Great Program

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

Beginning on March 23, every citizen in Virginia Beach will have an opportunity to participate in something that happens only every 10 years — the 1990 Census. A national census has been taken every 10 years in the United States since 1790.

Mandated by the U.S. Constitution, the decennial census is critical to Virginia Beach and Virginia for several reasons. Census statistics are the basis for reapportionment in the House of Representatives. With Virginia's population growth, we may gain additional Congressional seats. Virginia Beach's population growth may also warrant additional representation in the Virginia legislature.

Census statistics are also the basis upon which millions of dollars in federal and state grant funds are returned to our city each year. Finally, each census provides a portrait of our city. Over the decades, the portraits reveal how Virginia Beach has changed and offer information for planning and decision-making for businesses and city departments.

In spite of the importance of the census, about 2.2 million people, or about 1 percent, were not counted in the last census. Among minority populations, the percentage was higher — about 6 percent. Unfortunately, an undercount can result in flawed decisions. Inaccurate counts can curtail projects and cause lower funding for community programs. Often, those who could benefit most are those who are shortchanged when there is an undercount.

In order to push for a total count of our Virginia Beach population, I joined with my mayoral colleagues across the nation in appointing the Virginia Beach Mayor's Complete Count Committee. Over 60 citizens, representing a broad spectrum of Virginia Beach's population, are actively serving on this committee. Marcy Sims, director of the Department of Public Libraries, serves as chairman. The committee's purpose is to publicize the importance of a complete census count and encourage every citizen

You Count - Answer The National Census This Year

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

An important new program, Homework Hotline, offers students and parents additional access to teachers. For seventh, eighth, and ninth grade students (and their parents) of Virginia Beach City Public Schools, the call in program was started to provide support in the mathematics and language arts area.

Coordinated by Instructional Specialist, Sandra Mullins, and Assistant Principal, Dr. Patricia Gavin, the hotline is designed to help students do their homework. It is not designed so that students can have their homework done for them.

Based at Salem Junior High School, three phone lines have been established for the hotline, which is open from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays during the school year. Three people staff the phones each night: one to direct incoming calls, one to help with English homework problems, and one to aid in mathematics difficulties. The number to call is 473-5215.

The program began Feb. 5. Since then, about 20 calls have been logged in each night. To date most of the questions have dealt with mathematics. Often as not it is a parent who calls in. Everyone involved in the program is excited about the positive response. While, in this, the first year of the program, seventh, eighth, and ninth grade English and mathematics are the only subjects being covered. Current plans call for additional core subjects and grade levels to be included in future years. Next year, for example, plans call for the inclusion of science and the expansion of the service students and subjects will also be included later.

VBEA was very much involved in the development of the program. In 1986, Bill Fitzgerald, then a guidance counselor at Kempsville Junior High now the guidance department chairperson at Virginia Beach Junior High School, approached the school system and the VBEA with the request that such a program be organized. Working as a team, a seven person study committee was formed in 1987. From that committee came a plan to implement a hotline for the entire school division over several years, beginning with the 1989-90 academic year. The committee's plan also called for

The Constitution And The First Census of 1790

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

In 1787, the delegates to the Constitutional Convention hammered out the details of the new government. The Constitution they devised was vague in many clauses and full of compromises, which made its acceptance possible, but it rectified most of the weakness of the Articles of Confederation.

One of the most controversial issues was the struggle between the large and small states over representation. The question threatened to disrupt the convention. A critical compromise was finally worked out, and the question was resolved by giving the states equal representation in the Senate and apportioning seats in the House of Representatives according to their population.

Article I Section 2 of the Constitution states, "The actual Enumeration shall be made within three years after the first Meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent Term of ten Years, in such Manner as they shall by Law direct."

Moreau de Jonnes, a French statistician, observed, "The United States presents a phenomenon parallel in history — that of a people who instituted the statistics of their country on the very day they founded their government, and who regulated by the same instrument, the census of inhabitants, their civil and political rights, and the destinies of the Nation."

Based on the first census, the House of Representatives grew from 65 members to 106, but the problem of how to apportion or divide up the members was vexatious.

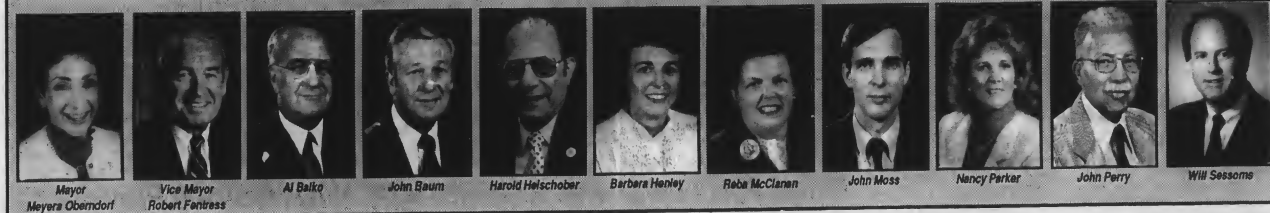

The First Congress did not wait three years to implement this section of the Constitution, but in its second session on March 1, 1790 passed the First Census Act. This first enumeration was not a simple head count, but asked for the following details:

- ✓ Name of the head of the family.
- ✓ Name of free white males of 16 years or more.
- ✓ Free white males under 16.
- ✓ Free white females.
- ✓ All other free persons.
- ✓ All slaves.

It should be noted that Indians were not to be counted, and the ages of

Curling said that he thought a big part of the 25 percent recycling requirement will come from automobile junkyards because the Suffolk landfill is equipped to take the "fluff," such as seat covers and other trimmings. The State will not permit most of the landfills to accept fluff, he said, but the Suffolk landfill is a state of the art facility.

Curling termed the current curbside program, which provides weekly collection of recyclables for up to 1,000 homes in seven of the eight communities served by the Authority, a success. Capital costs for the program were $285,000; 676 tons of recyclables were collected from May 1 to Dec. 31 and 53 percent of the homeowners participated.

An expansion of the program would bring 100,000 homes into the program during each of the next three years. The corresponding increase in the tipping fee would be $1.27 per ton (for nine months); $3.78 a ton, and $5.68 a ton.

The costs for the program are projected at $1,650,000 the first year, $2,815,000 the second year, and $4,278,000 the third year. Curling said the curbside method has an advantage in that people get involved and become more aware. Even with the $6 increase being requested by SPISA in the tipping fees (the fee is now $26.50) the fees compare favorably with other communities, he said.

Some comparative fees are Richmond; $50; Chesterfield County, $32; Henrico County, $35; Arlington County, $30; Prince William County, $35; Newport News, $25 (the only one lower).

When tipping fees are as much as $137 a ton in New Jersey, in the 1960s in Pennsylvania; over $27 in Hillsborough County, Fla., to $65 in Tampa, $35 and more in Connecticut and Delaware.

The projection of costs, Curling said, do not show the cost of additional facilities. He said that the Suffolk landfill has space until 1998, but after that Suffolk will not have space for half the waste. He said that a second waste-to-energy plant is being considered with Virginia Power.

He said that all the property being considered for additional landfill, space is nonideal wetlands which will require an Environmental Impact Statement, which, said Councilman John A. Baum, "will create more trash."

The legislative activity isn't all on the state side, said Curling. The Federal government has been enacting legislation involving solid waste. The Environmental Protection Agency has come out with new performance standards. Before an EPA permit is issued, Curling said, the locality or region must be recycling 45 percent of its waste.

What happens in areas with condos, asked Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress. Now waste is put into a chute which empties into a dumpster. How will the waste be recycled?

When asked about private collection, Curling responded, "We're better. Our orientation is service, not only the bottom line."

In answer to a question from Councilman John D. Moss, Curling said that the ash which comes from the SPISA's waste to energy plant in Suffolk would not be considered part of the 25 percent.

And if the district does not comply? asked Moss.

The District will not get permits for new facilities. Curling said, however that he can't envision that happening. "Will they leave it (the waste) in the street?"

"Take it to Richmond," replied Moss.

Curling said that alternatives other than disposal of yard waste and curbside collection were not considered because SPISA did not want to come up with more programs and more costs.

McClann said that the other programs usually evolve from the drop off program. "It appears to me you skipped some research . . . I think part of the decision making is looking at alternatives."

Oberndorf said that the SPISA needs to take another look at drop offs.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley, noting the 53 percent participation, said that people will be recycling or not. They would do it with the drop off system as well as the curbside.

Total assessments in other boroughs are: Kempsville, $4,622,292,199, a 4.6 percent increase; Bayside, $2,783,275,636, a 6.8 percent increase; Pungo, $182,152,591, a 6.7 percent increase; Blackwater, $34,629,259, a 2.9 percent increase, and Virginia Beach, $1,096,167,816, a 1 percent increase over the previous year, the increases have been growing smaller. The projected 1991 assessment of $15,901,821,201, shows an increase of $780,914,669 or 5.1 percent over the current year.

Commercial and industrial properties, which constitutes 20.6 percent of the tax base show an average increase of 6.04 percent and a media increase of 3.4 percent. Apartments actually show a 4.2 percent decrease in the average, and no change in the median, while real estate increased 2.45 percent on the average and 1.6 percent in the median.

The average single-family home in Virginia Beach is assessed at $111,800 while the median, the point at which the greatest number of homes are priced, is $87,600.

Of the city's housing stock, 40.1 percent was built between 1981 and 1990; 27.5 percent between 1971 and 1980, and 32.4 percent prior to 1971.

Annual new construction dropped to $355,308,923 from $418,360,708 in 1988 continuing the decline since 1986 when new construction amounted to $682,302,094.

The assessments are based on 89.3 percent of the true value of the property.

The city also has 54,613 acres of land in the land use program. The property has a market value of $391,734,044 but is assessed at $21,500,549 under the land use program. The deferred taxes on the property amount to $3,617,181.

Bananagan also reported that the real estate exemptions for senior citizens and the handicapped amounted to $479,485 for 817 recipients, compared to $404,541 in 1989 when there were 757 recipients.

Another $2,298,011,773 in tax exempt property is also excluded from the tax rolls.

Personality Profile

Lake Pembroke's Willinbrink Expresses Civic League Concerns

By Jean Brunner

Current Pembroke Meadows and Shores Civic League President Jim Willinbrink first saw Virginia Beach when he was 15 years old during a family vacation.

"My first sight of the ocean was (on that trip)," he said. "I was enthused with the possibility of living here."

Twenty-six years later, Virginia Beach would be his permanent home, but the young Willinbrink experienced all of the personal and career struggles common to his peer group.

Born in Louisville, Ky. in 1929, Willinbrink experienced the full force of the Great Depression throughout his childhood, and worked several jobs from age 11 up to high school graduation. His first job was working on a paper route. As he grew older, he worked as a clerk and stockboy at a sporting goods store and as a caddy for a golf course.

Families during that time didn't have a lot of money and getting a college education was "a struggle," he said. He found the money through participation in basketball. He received a basketball scholarship to the University of Louisville, but changed his direction to the Navy shortly after his admission. The reason was because he suffered an injury and lost the scholarship.

He turned to the Navy for an education in engineering and studied at the naval academy in Kentucky. He learned more than he would have in a civilian setting, he said. He didn't appreciate the discipline at the time, but it forced him to study harder than in his life before. In the long run, he was glad he joined the military and was glad at a naval academy.

"The injury turned out to be a blessing," he said. "In college, I might have just drifted around."

A shore assignment in Seattle, Washington led to some social opportunities. It was at these gatherings where he met his wife, Jeanette. They first met at a "politically oriented" cocktail party in 1963. They established a close friendship and married in Seattle in 1964. Seven years later, they moved to Virginia Beach.

He finally made Hudgins Court on Lake Pembroke his permanent home when he was 41 in 1970. At 61, the retired Navy captain has also been a Pembroke Meadows and Shores civic league member since 1971.

"My primary allegiance is to the civic leagues," he said. "I can't stress the importance of them."

As a member, he has association with good people who are not only concerned about selfish interests, but who want to improve their neighborhood and community, he said.

He was vice president in 1975 and then made president that same year. He was also president in 1976 and then continued as an active member by holding such posts as building and grounds committee chairman. He has resumed the role as president for the past two years.

The Pembroke civic league is one of the "more active civic leagues," he said.

The members hold monthly meetings, publish a monthly newsletter and a community directory that lists all the residents in the neighborhood, information about the area such as deed restrictions and emergency phone numbers. This is done every three or four years, he said.

The league has also improved the Lake Meadows Park over the years. It existed on land owned by the civic league but at the time had a lot of "unsavory" activity going on, he said.

The league started to clean it up and planted trees and daffodils in the mid 1970s, he said. They also installed a gazebo and are "proud of the park."

"It's a jewel of a park area," he said.

The park area is on the end of Pembroke Boulevard and is a good experience enjoyed by the community, he added.

Willinbrink said that the league represents about 800 homes and they usually have between 300 to 400 members, he said.

The league members often act as objective mediators in neighborhood disputes, he said.

If someone complains to the league, for example, about a neighbor's messy yard, a member from the building and grounds committee will contact the neighbor and discuss the problem with him, he said.

The league is currently concerned about the bridge across Lake Pembroke and the members want to make sure that the lake and surrounding environment is protected, he said.

So far, he has received assurance from city council that the environment is safe, he said.

His involvement in the civic league is just one aspect of his life.

"I have a wide spectrum of interests," he said. "I enjoy participation in sports, music and reading."

"I also enjoy my family and friends," he added.

DAR Chapters Award History Students, Teachers

The Daughters of the American Revolution, Adam Thoroughgood, Francis Land, Lynnhaven Parish and Princess Anne County Chapters, recently held a ceremony in recognition of excellence in American History at the School Administration building.

Since 1956, the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution has promoted February as American History month. The DAR presented awards to Outstanding American History Teachers and Students.

The teachers awarded were: Mrs.

Patricia Hynes McGloine, Princess Anne High School; Ms. Kathleen Higgins Ashby, Bayside High; Mrs. C. Marie Larson, White Oaks Elementary; and Mrs. Carolyn R. Dodson, Kellam High School.

The students awarded were: Yasaman Ayat and Jamie Christine Walker, Cox High School; Catherine Jane Forbes and Jess William Drab, Bayside High; Christopher Brendan Godwin and Carolyn Marie Feltes, Green Run High; and Kenneth Andrew Owen and Jennifer Santos Madriga, First Colonial High.

VBEA Report

paid teachers to man the hotline, which would concentrate on seventh, eighth, and ninth grade English during the first year.

Coincidentally, in the spring of 1989, Salem Junior High School's growth plan committee came to the conclusion that such a hotline was needed. As originally envisioned, volunteers would have manned Salem Junior's hotline. While researching other hotlines, the Salem Junior committee discovered that planning was already underway for a division wide hotline. The two groups got together.

Thirteen teachers, all but one from Salem Junior High School, are answering parent and student calls.

"The Homework Hotline was developed to provide support to students having difficulties with their homework. Students with a specific problem can reach a solution by having a teacher walk through that problem with them," said Sandra Mullins.

Dr. Gavin added that "the parents we surveyed about the program are excited. They see it as an opportunity to touch base with teachers. I think the hotline will serve to reassure parents about their ability to help their children with their homework."

VBEA wishes these teachers and program coordinators the very best. It is a program that is needed and is definitely a plus for students and their families. It is also one more effort to unite the community and the schools. We know how important it is to have parents involved in the learning process. We applaud this effort that emphasizes learning as an interactive process involving students, parents and teachers for lifelong success.

Towing

and agent for Bridge Commerce Center and Stowaway Self Storage, owned by a sales representative for the Hampton Roads Window Company, and Kristen Rorer (the couple were married on Dec. 30) were staying overnight at the office until work on a garage apartment could be completed. The office is located at the Virginia Beach Boulevard address.

The automobile was towed away on Dec. 14 by the B & L Towing Company, and subsequently purchased by a Suffolk junk dealer. Rorer said that they had intended to sell parts from the car.

The Rorers are now suing Canada and his wife, the Bridge Commerce Center and Stowaway Self Storage, and the B & L Towing Company for $7,000.

The Rorers have proposed that the city adopt an ordinance requiring more accountability from towing companies.

The ordinance and other remarks by Minns were deferred by Mayor Meyers Oberndorf to City Attorney Leslie Lilley for review.

Minns said that the tow truck statutes look all right on the books, but that they fall down.

He said that when an individual's income is only $800 a month, and the tow fees, including rent, pile up sometimes to $300, it is impossible for the owners to reclaim their cars. He said that sometime all they have is their car. He said that their employers will not tolerate getting to work late so that they need their cars.

He said the signs up now seem to be inadequate. He said he asked police why they allow cars to be towed in spite of what the signs say, and was told that they are not aware of the law.

Sometimes, he said, a tow truck can make $330 a day without towing a single vehicle from drop fees. These fees are charged when a tow truck gets ready to tow a vehicle but owner shows up and pays a $10 drop fee.

He said that one of the problems is that the law does not require that the tow truck owner's name be placed on the receipt so that the owner cannot be cited. He said that if the car is found later, the owner can't even get a warrant because no name has been divulged. He said that the owner received a letter from the town company after the car is "stolen" and after the bill has escalated. He said that the owner should be notified by certified mail that the car will be sold.

The ordinance recommended by the Rorers would make it unlawful to sell towed vehicles at auction or otherwise without first sending two certified letters, both return receipt requested, to the registered owner and allowing the owner to bid at an such action.

The ordinance also would require that no operator should tow any vehicle belonging to another owner from public or private property without notifying (within 24 hours) both the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles and the registered owner via certified mail, return receipt requested the location to which the vehicle has been towed and the towing storage fee levied against the vehicle. The firm would be required to keep the vehicles for up to 90 days in the firm's storage lot.

Violation would be considered a Class III misdemeanor which carries a fine. Also included would be a forfeiture of the towing company's license for ten years.

Mayor's Report to complete and mail back the form he or she will receive by mail on or around March 23.

The Mayor's Complete Count Committee has been hard at work since December 1989, preparing public service announcements, printing flyers and contacting businesses and civic organizations to assist with publicizing the census.

The Census Bureau estimates that a city loses between $400 and $600 each year for every person not counted. Given an average 1 percent undercount, Virginia Beach could lose between $16 and $20 million for the 10-year life of the census in terms of federal and state grants that are allocated based on population.

Virginia Beach is counting on you to answer the confidential Census questionnaire by census day — April 1, 1990. It's your right, it's your duty and it's good for all of us.

This article was compiled through the courtesy and assistance of Martha J. Sims, director, Department of Public Libraries and chairman of the Virginia Beach Mayor's Complete Count Committee.

"There has been a problem across the country. Most beekeepers have had a terrible winter. I've lost 10 hives as a result of it," said Baker, who currently has six hives left. She said the approximate cost of losing a hive is $150 for the bees and $85 for the honey she could have sold.

Most beekeepers take precautions when going into a hive. Normally a head veil, long sting-resistant gloves and cotton overalls are worn to protect a beekeeper from being stung. But the outfit doesn't always work.

Buchanan said he has been stung "thousands" of times, sometimes so badly that his head and hands swell up to three times their normal size. Baker and Miller have also been stung, and both women are allergic to bee venom.

"The fear of the bees bothers people more than anything else. They do what they're supposed to. They don't come out and charge you," said Miller.

"If you go easy on them, they won't sting you. Stay out of their way and they won't bother you," added Buchanan.

What prompts a person to want to become a beekeeper? Miller said everybody has their own reasons.

"I just always enjoyed learning things. I discovered beekeeping was a great challenge," said Baker.

Many beekeepers get their bees through the mail. They can be ordered by the pound and arrive in a cage with ajar of sugar water that they can eat. A two-and-one-half pound cage, which contains 10,500 bees, costs $29.75. The bees can also be obtained during a "swarm," a time during the spring when bees are more

Once the bees are obtained, they are placed in hives, which are 19-inch deep boxes with four sides but no tops or bottoms. It costs approximately $120 to purchase a complete hive. The bees keep the temperature inside the box between 94 to 96 degrees.

The queen bee lays between 1,000 and 2,000 eggs a day in the "brooding chamber," a box where the honeybee makes a honeycomb. A hive can hold a maximum of 80,000 bees, which only live for weeks and then die.

Baker said the best way to become familiar with beekeeping is to attend the beekeepers association's meeting. The meetings are held the second Monday of each month at the Headquarters Library in Chesapeake. The association hosts guest speakers and programs concerning beekeeping.

A short course in beekeeping will be held Friday, March 9 from 7 to 10 p.m. and Saturday, March 10 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the grounds of the VPI Experimental Station on Diamond Springs Road in Virginia Beach.

The featured instructor will be VPI professor of entomology, Dr. Richard Fell. His topics will be: getting started, hive management, hive inspections, disease control, honey handling, equipment selection, queen rearing and honey plans.

The program is being sponsored by the association and the Virginia Tech Cooperative Extension Services of Chesapeake and Virginia Beach.

"We have a real good time and we learn as we go along. It's a wonderful hobby," said Baker.

"They're wonderful little creatures that we need. Once you get into it, you're curiosity gets the best of you," Miller said.

Virginia Pathology Society; member and past president of the Linlier Civic League; member of the Broad Bay Sailing Association; and is a local bank board member.

At the hospital, Krueger is responsible for examining tissue removed during surgeries; examining biopsies; examining pap smears; performing autopsies and examining blood and bone marrow.

As King Neptune, he will "preside over the festival during Neptune Festival," and attend the parade, balls, receptions and social activities that go along with the title.

"It'll be difficult that week. I'm accustomed to being active. My partners will probably be upset more than I will," Krueger said, referring the amount of time he will spend as King Neptune.

Center said Krueger's first big appearance as King Neptune will probably take place in April or May. This is the first year that King Neptune's identity has been announced so early in the year.

"It's to give us more planning time on pre-festival events that will be occurring through out the spring and summer," Center said. "We don't really take an inordinate amount of his time except for during the festival."

Krueger, who will hold the title for one year, first came to the area in 1965. After graduating from the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond, he went on to pathology training school in Atlanta, Ga., and Miami, Fla.

When a friend from medical school contacted him about a position as a pathologist in a new hospital in Virginia Beach, Krueger jumped at the chance.

"I was very impressive," he said. He and his wife, Olia Frances Hill, a Hampton native, have been married for 34 years. They have three daughters, one a financial planner for USAA, the other a teacher in Richmond and the youngest is living in Virginia Beach working for a car dealership.

"I'm not sure who was more excited, me or my wife. She seems to enjoy all these activities," he said.

Pungo/Blackwater Area News

Police Seek Blackwater Thieves

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is seeking information about three burglaries that occurred at the same home in 3200 block of Old Carolina Road in Blackwater. Anyone who provides information that leads to an arrest or the recovery of any of the stolen property, you will receive a cash reward of up to $1,000. All three burglaries occurred during the day on a Thursday - the first on June 15, 1989; the second on August 31, 1989; and the third on January 11, 1990.

The items stolen include a blue, 1965, Ford Mustang which was recovered a short distance from the house but the Virginia license plate, FASTER 1, is still missing.

Also stolen were two radio-controlled, toy Mustang cars, Mustang jackets and t-shirts, a crystal Mustang, a 1955 Princess Anne High School class ring, other jewelry, a television, video recorder, stereo, compact disc player, camera, coins, and guns.

An older model, dark brown, Ford Pinto, was seen in the driveway by a witness. The Pinto was occupied by two white males in their late teens to early twenties - one with blonde hair and the other with dark hair.

Anyone who has information about these burglaries or the stolen property, can call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers will not have to give their name to collect a cash reward.

Detmer On Dean's List

A leading Virginia phone company is helping kids make the most important call in life.

Contel Corporation, a company with more than $3.1 billion in revenues and sales, provides local telephone service and integrated telecommunications and information systems through four sectors: Telephone Operations, Cellular Communications, Federal Systems and Information Systems. Contel is the only organization to sponsor the CHOICES program nationwide.

Teachers, with the help of parents, do more than most of us will ever know to hold young people in school. But when kids won't listen to them, who's there to help?

For hundreds of school systems across America, the answer is Choices.

Through this innovative program, volunteers from the "real world" open students' eyes to the value of an education. Some of the speakers are former dropouts who made the difficult choice to come back to school. Other speakers give an employer's perspective on the role of learning. All of the speakers present provocative ideas that have the power to change the attitudes of teens who are thinking of quitting school.

Choices, a national program first developed in 1985, has proven to be effective in getting through to young people and keeping them in school.

At Contel of Virginia, we are proud to be a major sponsor of Choices. Since 1988, we have helped get the message across to more than 18,000 high school freshmen in the state.

By reaching them at this critical time in their development and demonstrating to them the real need for an education, we hope to improve the value of their lives from now on.

And in the process, make Virginia a better place for all of us to live and work.
